U. S., Canada To Declare Confidence In Britain

Monetary Talks To End Today With Vow of Aid In Dollar Crisis

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The American-British-Canadian dollar talks are expected to end late today with public agreement on one all-important principle and on several minor and temporary devices to ease the shortage of dollars in the sterling countries.

The principle is that Britain's economic troubles are a danger for the entire free world; that economic dangers cannot be separated from political and military; and that the United States and Canada will work actively and unceasingly with the British to help solve them.

The communique to be issued late today, if the timetable holds, may disappoint those on both sides of the ocean who had expected dramatic and decisive results. Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, chairman of the conferees, may insist on wrapping it in the same kind of jargon that spoiled the effect of the communique issued at the end of his London talks last July.

Budget Cuts Likely

Still, the outcome will amount to a declaration of American and Canadian confidence in the British, at a time when the pound sterling is under fire all over the world.

Sir Stafford Cripps, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, appears to have satisfied the Americans and Canadians that he intends to cut his budget still further; that his government will boost productivity in its factories, with the help of labor and management alike, and will push its sales in dollar-earning areas.

The new budget savings—unlikely to be announced until after the chancellor returns to England next week—will go beyond the 600-million dollars he has already ordered.

In response to these British efforts, the United States will do a number of specific things to cushion the dollar shortage and improve British prospects of earning dollars.

Bevin, Acheson to Confer

The easements will be small—an assurance, for example, that the British can go on buying wheat in Canada with Marshall Plan dollars; a promise of increased American buying of strategic materials, probably through barter operations of the Commodity Credit Corporation; and minor improvements in customs procedures which will not require going to Congress for new legislation. A thorough overhauling of the customs' code, which the Administration wants as much as anyone, will have to await congressional action next year.

Morse Ordered To Rest After Fall From Horse

Salem, Oreg., Sept. 11 (AP).—United States Senator Wayne L. Morse (R., Oreg.) was ordered today to remain in a hospital for several days to rest after a fall during a State fair horse show.

The Senator was knocked unconscious last night when a buggy he was driving overturned on a sharp turn in the exhibition.

Dr. E. S. Fortner reported that X-rays taken today revealed Morse had not suffered any broken bones.

Last night's accident was the second such mishap in three nights. The Senator had walked away from the earlier mishap.

Tests Presage Future

Rocket 'Moon Express' to Be As Tall as Office Building

Las Cruces, N. Mex., Sept. 11 (AP).—America's newest super-rocket soared only 33 miles into the air, but it brought back to scientists waiting on the ground a picture of what the first space ships may be like.

On the basis of the performance of the Viking II in a test flight last Tuesday when 95 percent of all its intricate gadgets worked, tomorrow's Moon Express may be expected to look like a pencil: thin, round and as high as an office building.

Strangest of all, it probably will not have fins.

The 46-foot-long Viking II, largest yet produced in the United States, was controlled in flight Tuesday by changing the direction of the exhaust from its rocket tubes.

The Viking II is equipped with fins, but they were not used.

"We eventually hope to eliminate fins entirely," says Dr. Homer E. Newell, rocket expert in the Naval Research Laboratory at White Sands Proving Ground near here. "The drag on fins at extremely high speeds is tremendous."

The Viking II reached a speed of 1775 miles an hour and an altitude of 33 miles. Its predecessor's top speed was 2250 m.p.h., and it soared to a height of 50 miles. However, Newell termed the latest flight a success.

"We were after stability and control this time," he said. "Next time we will concentrate on engine performance."

In last week's test the liquid-oxygen-and-alcohol fuel burned for only 49 seconds, although it carried enough fuel for 65 seconds. The first Viking, sent up May 3, burned through 53 seconds of a similar load. Failure of the rockets to consume their full fuel loads has not been explained.

The Navy plans to fire a total of 10 Vikings in its current research program, designed to study cosmic rays and the upper atmosphere as well as to improve guided missiles and to aid in the construction of future aircraft.

NSRB Studies All Phases of U. S. Transit

Mobilization Needs In Case of War Under Intensive Survey

By James E. Warner
NYHT News Service

Every phase of the Nation's transportation system—from ocean and airliners to taxicabs and private automobiles—is now under intensive study to determine the best method of control and coordination in event of another war.

Piecemeal announcements regarding the broad survey have been made by the National Security Resources Board, subject of public controversy between President Truman and the Senate, where the Armed Services Committee tabled the nomination of his old Senate crony, Mon C. Wallgren of Washington, to be its chairman.

With seven groups, each having representatives of industry and both civilian and military branches of the Government among its members, NSRB task forces are conducting the transportation survey.

Out of the reports of the various task groups will come the basic decision as to whether the Government will attempt to take over operation of all transportation, or merely control it.

A transportation task group of the NSRB emphatically recommended last year that the Government not attempt to operate railroads or any other private transport agency, but merely subject them to necessary war controls. It recommended the intensive survey now under way, and suggested an all-powerful War Transport Administration under civilian control, to exist only during the war emergency, as the answer to transportation control in the event of World War III.

The report of the 1948 task group, headed by John R. Turney, vice president of the Cotton Belt Railroad, and including representatives of shipping, truck, bus and government interests, attracted little public attention; nor has the

Greece Warns It May Strike At Neighbors

Albanian Assistance To Guerillas Cited By War Minister

Athens, Sept. 11 (AP).—War Minister Panayotis Kanellopoulos warned today that Greece is thinking of hitting back at Albania and her other Communist neighbors unless they stop serving as bases for Greek guerilla forces.

Greece has charged repeatedly that Communist-led guerillas have launched attacks on government troops from Albanian soil. Yugoslavia recently closed her border with Greece. Greek officials have said some aid is still coming from Bulgaria.

"If our northern neighbors will try again to help guerillas enter Greek territory then they must know that the Greek army, based on elementary principles of self-defense, will neutralize the source from which the guerillas invade Greek territory," the newspaper Embros quoted Kanellopoulos.

The extreme rightwing newspaper Acropolis criticized the government for not sending the army into Albania in pursuit of guerillas who fled across the frontier during the recent campaign in the Grammos and Vitsi regions.

Electronic Brain Inventors to Get Medal for Work

Philadelphia, Sept. 11 (AP).—The inventors of the Univac, giant electronic brain, today were cited as corecipients of the Franklin Institute's Howard N. Potts medal.

The inventors are Dr. John W. Mauchly, physicist, and J. Presper Eckert, jr., electronic engineer. They operate the Eckert-Mauchly Computer Corp. in Philadelphia.

The Potts medal is awarded for distinguished work in science or the arts. Eckert and Mauchly will receive their awards at ceremonies at the Franklin Institute October 19.

Seeds of Discontent

Tito's Rebellion Shows Signs Of Spreading in Soviet Bloc

Belgrade, Sept. 11 (AP).—Yugoslavia's rebellion against Soviet commands today showed signs of spreading throughout the Cominform area.

Titoism has found important followers in other countries suffering from the Kremlin's effort to capitalize on their economic weaknesses.

There were signs, too, that Titoism was spurring Russian wrath and resentment. Under the ruthless Russian thumb, it was obvious that independence movements in Balkan countries have had rough birth pains. But it was equally obvious that where so many high-ranking Communists have been denounced, there must be many rank and file plain folk who oppose Russian rule.

The latest clear-cut example has come from Hungary, where the government yesterday formally accused former Foreign Minister Laszlo Rajk and seven others of plotting to overthrow the regime.

Trial and execution of Albania's Koci Xoxe, removal of Greece's rebel leader, Gen. Markos Vafiades, removal in Bulgaria of Traicho Kostov from his party post, and development of an independent anti-Moscow Comunist Party in Germany were among the chain of developments in which Rajk's is the latest.

It was recalled that in his early-August speech at Skoplje, Tito said, "We will help the Bulgarians to remove these individuals who have raised obstacles to creation and preservation of brotherly relations."

Diplomatic observers here now give his words a much broader meaning. They see in them both a call and an offer of support to all who opposed subservience to Moscow.

Acheson Errs About China, Tydings Says

Senator Contradicts Assertion U. S. Arms Were Surrendered By Nationalists

By the United Press

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) yesterday branded as "totally untrue" Secretary of State Acheson's statement that China's Nationalist armies surrendered large quantities of American arms to the Communists.

He also disputed Acheson's assertion that the Nationalists lost no battles in their ill-fated campaign for lack of United States arms aid.

Tydings said his information to the contrary came from "reliable" sources and is the "best" available.

He is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and vice chairman of the special committee considering the Administration's $1,450,000,000 program to arm free nations against Communist aggression.

Statement Is Surprise

His statement came as a complete surprise, since he had cast the decisive vote Friday against a Republican attempt to earmark 175 million dollars of the arms aid bill for China.

The combined Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees, splitting along strict party lines, voted to set aside 75 million dollars for China and stipulated that it should be spent only as President Truman sees fit.

The group also cut the over-all arms figure to $1,314,000,000 with provisions to keep most of it on tap in this country until a European defense plan is worked out.

The China issue comes up today for a final committee review, but it was not known whether Tydings will now change his stand.

Speaks Over Radio

In his weekly radio broadcast over WBAL, Baltimore, Tydings said:

"There is no doubt about it that at times Nationalist forces have surrendered to the Communists. There is no doubt about it that at times the Communist forces have surrendered to the Nationalists; but to create the picture in the American mind that the Chinese Nationalists have just surrendered willy-nilly without fighting is to do the Nationalist army a great disservice in the field of truth.

"Quite often, some of these armies have had little or no equipment; some of these Nationalist armies have had very little in the way of ammunition.

"Where the Nationalist forces have had good equipment and good ammunition, they have fought with a great deal of courage and a great many sacrifices . . . It is my belief that the Nationalists, where they have been equipped, have fought pretty well, and these stories about fully equipped Nationalist forces going over to the Communists have been exaggerated out of all proportion and in most cases are totally untrue."

Public Work On Vast Scale Is Proposed

Program Advocated To Expand American Market and Afford Outlet for Exports

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

A broad program of public works to maintain employment and buying power and help absorb European production was recommended yesterday by Frank Altschul of the National Planning Association.

Altschul, chairman of the association's International Committee, is chairman of the board of the General American Investors Co. in private life. His recommendations were published by the association in a pamphlet called "Toward Building a Better America."

Not only have productive facilities in the United States outgrown domestic demand, Altschul said, but dollar shortages so far have prevented profitable exports. This situation will not be alleviated with European recovery, he added, but "is bound to be aggravated as European competition grows."

For Expanding Home Market

He added:

"This is a dangerous condition which cannot prudently be allowed to continue. The corrective lies in our own hands. The domestic market for the goods and services which our economy can so bountifully provide is capable of limitless expansion.

"Our task is to convert potential into effective demand. There is work in this country crying to be done, not all of which an unaided capitalism can undertake.

"There are slums to be cleared, houses and roads, schools and hospitals to be built, railroads to be modernized and reconditioned. There are natural resources to be husbanded through reforestation, soil conservation and flood control. There are substandard areas of the deep South which urgently require intensive effort.

Effect on Tariff Question

The increased market resulting from such a program, Altschul said, would absorb not only American production but much production of Europe. In those circumstances, he declared, "we could approach without apprehension the question of a further reduction of tariffs" with consequently freer flow of the world's goods.

Altschul expresses the conviction that the Marshall Plan, contrary to early hopes, will not by 1952 bring "the accounts of Western Europe with the rest of the world again . . . in manageable balance." Original assumptions, he said, were "far too optimistic," for these reasons:

1. Mutual aid within Western Europe and "discreet prodding from our side" have failed to produce important economic integration in the Marshall Plan countries.

2. Political tension has prevented resumption of trade between western and eastern Europe.

3. Doubt has increased that overseas markets would or could absorb the production of an industrially revived Europe.

Internal Revenue Figures

'Slots' Illegal, But 33 Places Paid Taxes on Them in D. C.

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

Operators or proprietors of at least 33 different premises in Washington paid Federal taxes last fiscal year on "coin-operated gaming devices" that are illegal here.

This was disclosed last night in a survey of statistics of the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the year ended June 30, 1949.

Figures on the taxes on "one-armed bandits" are kept in the Office of the Internal Revenue Collector at Baltimore and the ones made public here were taken from a detailed report to the bureau here by that office.

Both George Morris Fay, United States Attorney, and Lieut. Roy Blick, chief of the police Vice Squad, indicated they were not aware of the number of Washington places which paid the slot machine taxes.

Fay expressed the opinion that "probably most of them are in clubs, such as the ones found in a raid on the Variety Club here a couple of years ago."

Lieutenant Blick said:

"I'm sure a lot of them are on Government reservations such as Bolling Field, Anacostia and Fort McNair. I know they have them there, and we can't touch them."

Asked, however, if he thought there were 33 such Government reservations sporting the illegal machines, he said, "Probably not."

An Internal Revenue Bureau official explained the situation as far as the tax is concerned.

"We tax the machines wherever we find them, under a law passed about 10 years ago. The tax is $100 each for coin-operated gaming machines. These tax receipts we issue are not, and I repeat, not, a Federal license to operate the machines.

"Whether or not they are allowed to operate is entirely up to local law and local authorities. If the local people run them out, then we don't collect the taxes."

The Internal Revenue Bureau collects also a $10 tax on each pinball machine, when such a machine does not pay off. These are called "coin-operated amusement devices." If they pay off, then the $100 tax per machine applies.

Figures in the Internal Revenue Bureau report show that though payoff slot machines are banned in most States, there still are thousands in operation.

The bureau report, which does not indicate legality, showed that Illinois headed the list with 6961 places offering taxed machines. Texas was second with 5919; California third with 5042 places. In Ohio, there were 4160 and in Massachusetts, 324.

New York State had 624, most of them upstate, with few in the New York City area. Figures were not immediately available for Maryland and Virginia.

Total revenue from the slot machines and pinball machines was not itemized separately. From taxes on both, Uncle Sam took in a total of $19,270,940 during the fiscal year 1949.

That's right—almost 20 million dollars. What the machines themselves took in is both astronomical and problematical.

Third Critically Hurt

Auto Crash Kills 2 Students Returning From Country Club

Currell Vance, Jr. Accident victim | Herbert H. Mittleman Killed in crash | Henry D. Jawish, Jr. Seriously injured

Two Washington college students were instantly killed early yesterday morning, and a third was critically injured, in an auto crash while en route home from a Congressional Country Club dinner in their honor.

In other traffic accidents, a Hillside, Md., man was killed by a hit-and-run driver in Charles County, Md., and two persons were hospitalized after accidents here.

The college students were killed when their 1949 convertible ran off River rd., near Seven Locks rd., in Bethesda shortly after 1:30 a. m. The car hit and broke off a telephone pole, jumped a 6-foot ditch, slammed into an embankment 20 feet further, rolled 75 feet and skidded, wheels up, to a stop 95 feet beyond.

The dead were identified as Currell Vance, jr., 20, of 3901 Connecticut ave. nw., son of a Federal Court of Claims Commissioner,

Perils of Perle

Nazi Ghost May Haunt Mesta Galas

Luxembourg, Sept. 11 (AP).—Mrs. Perle Mesta, Washington's No. 1 party-giver, may find some unpleasant ghosts among her guests when she starts entertaining in this tiny capital.

Luxembourgers are known throughout Europe for their solid, unimaginative, middle-class qualities. But many of them swear that the residence of the new American minister is haunted.

Its former tenant, they point out, was Nazi Gauleiter Gustav Simon. Simon hid out as a gardener in the British zone of Germany after the liberation. He was caught, jailed, and found hanged in his cell the day before he was to be turned over the Luxembourg authorities for trial.

"I think some German lived in it, didn't he?" Mrs. Mesta asked a newsman soon after her arrival.

She undoubtedly has been enlightened since.

The house was built for a wealthy Belgian contractor. Designed in a heavy German mid-Victorian style, it has 14 rooms, none of them very large. There is

Tories Get Laugh From Laborites' Poster Mixup

Eastbourne, England, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Conservatives bitterly opposed to the Labor government's nationalization program congratulated the Laborites today on their latest posters.

The posters, prominently displayed throughout Eastbourne, said:

"Today Britain has the highest production, the lowest unemployment and the best health record in history."

Immediately below, printed in large type, was:

"Nationalization will stop this!"

A Socialist spokesman explained: "The poster came in sections, and unfortunately they have been put up in the wrong order.

Bills Involving $21 Billions Deadlocked

Measures Approved By Both Houses, But Await Conference

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Cleared by both Houses but still requiring conference adjustments, five money bills totalling more than 21 billion dollars have been at a complete standstill ever since the House recessed August 26.

Senate spokesmen said no conferences have been held, nor apparently can any be arranged, until the House returns from its "vacation" on September 21.

In fact, three of the House-Senate-passed bills, including the huge $12,731,834,478 national defense bill, haven't even been sent to conference by the House. Although the House reconvenes twice a week in pro-forma sessions, members left behind weren't empowered to transact any business.

The result is the biggest appropriation snarl on Capitol Hill within the memory of the oldest legislator if not in history.

Never in recent times have the annual money bills, normally timed to take effect on the July 1 start of each fiscal year, been allowed to pile up as long as 10 weeks.

Already Congress has voted three "stopgap" extensions to Government agencies which otherwise couldn't meet payrolls or do business until their bills cleared. It may now have to vote a fourth emergency grant.

The last stopgap extension will carry Government activities through October 1. With the House not returning for business until September 21, that leaves only nine days for both Houses to unscramble the maze of bills.

Delayed passage by the Senate of the $1,314,000,000 military assistance authorization bill may complicate the money bill tieup still more. The Administration is expected to insist that funds to set in motion the military assistance program be sped through

Rocks Aglow in Dark

Forbidden Wind-Carved 'City' Awes Explorers in Australia

London, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Scientists who have "rediscovered" Australia while exploring for uranium disclosed today they had seen many strange sights including a wind-carved "city" which glowed in the dark and an emu that laid an egg on the run.

The scientists said the areas had not been thoroughly explored since surveys in the early days were made "almost at a gallop because savage aborigines kept white men on the move."

The aborigines, they said, eat live snakes. They reported also they had found an invisible river, orange groves and rich vegetable areas where maps depict only wilderness, and fish that climb trees.

At the almost geographical center of Australia, they said, the little township of Alice Springs is watered by the Lloyd River which has its mouth and source underground. Nobody has seen the river, but it is known to run under a railway and highway.

North of Alice Springs, the scientists reported finding "devils marbles," pyramidical piles of spherical rocks from 18 to 25 feet in diameter. The scientists had no idea where they came from.

They said they were chased by "willy-nillies," miniature whirlpools of red dust traveling at amazing speed. While being chased by one of these, they said, they saw the emu lay the egg at full gallop.

In the swamps of the Darwin area, the scientists photographed fish using their foremost fins to waddle ashore and to climb low branches of the trees where "they

Inland Plant Being Shut; Union Reply Due Today

Truman Board's Plan Is Reported As Finding Favor On Both Sides

Pittsburgh, Sept. 11 (AP).—The five major steel companies in the country will go along with President Truman on his request for a 10-day extension of the steel truce.

In rapid-fire order the "Big Five" wired their acceptance to the President. They agreed to continue operating at least until September 25 in an effort to stave off a paralyzing strike.

The deadline is midnight Tuesday, but Philip Murray, head of the CIO United Steelworkers, hasn't said whether he'll go along with the President. His reply is expected Monday.

Companies which have notified the President of their acceptance of the truce extension are: U. S. Steel Corp.; Bethlehem Steel Co.; Republic Steel Corp.; Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., and Inland Steel Co.

Rail Strike Feared

However, Inland Steel late today began preparations for shutting down its huge Indiana Harbor, Ind., plant in anticipation of a strike. Clarence B. Randall, Inland president, said the company has no other choice but to begin a gradual shutdown—declaring it was necessary to protect workers and equipment at the plant.

In Pittsburgh, big U. S. Steel had plenty of worries beside the possibility of a strike by the CIO Steelworkers. The Union Railroad, an interplant line, is scheduled to go on strike at 6:30 a. m. (EST) Tuesday. The railroad strike would idle 30,000 U. S. Steel employes, along with about 20,000 employes in other steel plants served by the railroad.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen ordered the strike when unable to agree on working rules. No wage dispute is involved. The President appointed a fact-finding board to investigate the dispute and it reported last July 29, recommending the arbitration. The railroad agreed to abide by the recommendation. But the Brotherhood didn't.

Other Answers Awaited

While the "Big Five" of the steel industry went along with the President, scores of little companies in the industry prepared their answers. Without exception they were expected to tell the President they would accept his 10-day truce.

The answer of the one-million-member CIO United Steel Workers Union to both the board and the President also is due Monday after meetings of the union executive board (at 9 a. m., E.S.T.) and the wage policy committee (at 1 p. m., E.S.T.).

Official comment on the board's recommendations is not to be had. But some company and union sources see a possibility the fact-

Fire on Truck Here Damages Furniture Load

Fire believed to have been caused by a cigarette yesterday did an estimated $250 damage to furniture loaded on a truck parked at 13th and I sts. nw.

Leonard Del Vecchio, owner of the truck, said the furniture was being transported from a manufacturer in Elkton, Va., to a Baltimore dealer. He had parked the truck overnight near 1219 I st. nw., where he lives.

Del Vecchio said the furniture was worth $500, and placed the damage at half that amount. The fire apparently occurred about 11 a. m., he said, when someone tossed a lighted cigarette into the truck.

Easton, Pa., Sept. 11 (AP).—Easton officials lifted the city's house quarantine for all children—and within 24 hours five new polio cases were reported.

Infantile paralysis has hit Easton hard this year, with 80 cases reported. There have been three deaths. As a safeguard the city ordered the quarantine August 28.

New Anti-Red Plot Charged to Tito

'Have Best Now'

Reds Created Tank in 1915, Pravda Says

Moscow, Sept. 11 (AP).—Pravda claimed today the Russians invented the tank a year and a half before that fighting machine first appeared in Britain. Not only that, said Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, Russian designers have now created tanks which have no equal in the world.

The articles were published as the Soviet Union celebrated "Tank Day." All papers published large portraits of Prime Minister Stalin and the text of an order of the day by Armed Forces Minister Alexander M. Vasilevsky. This order demanded new successes in the development of armored and mechanized armies.

The article in Pravda, the Communist Party's organ, was written by Semyon Ilyich Bogdanov, marshal of armored forces. It said:

"The facts show that the first tank designs appeared in Russia considerably earlier than people started to work on these questions abroad, and the first models of Russian-built tanks were constructed a year and a half earlier than similar machines appeared in Britain."

He said the date the first tank was made in Russia was May, 1915.

"But the tank designs in Russia were received by the conservative Czarist officials with the utmost hostility," Bogdanov wrote, in explaining why Britain put the first fighting tank on the field during the First World War.

[The United Press said official newspapers accused the western powers today of brandishing atomic weapons as they prepared for a new war and reassured the Russian people that "we have forces on which we can rely."

[Marshal Bogdanov, wrote in Pravda that Russian people were immune to the threat of atomic weapons which "can frighten only those with weak nerves."

"The Soviet people cannot forget for one minute that the imperialists are preparing a new war and brandish atomic weapons which incidentally can frighten only those with weak nerves," Bogdanov said. "The great patriotic war sufficiently, convincingly proved that our people never suffered from weak nerves. We have armed forces on which we can rely."]

Prague, Sept. 11 (AP).—A large-scale plot by Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia to form eastern Europe into a combine against Soviet Russia was charged by Czechoslovak Communists today.

The official Communist newspaper Rude Pravo (Red Right) said the alleged anti-government plot disclosed yesterday in Hungary was only part of the scheme.

It said assassination of various Hungarian government leaders and a military attack on Hungary were opening steps of Tito's campaign to organize anti-Soviet forces in the "peoples democracies"—countries in the Soviet orbit—and to sow dissension in those countries "for the benefit of the western powers in their cold war with the Soviet Union."

Rude-Pravo charged that "American imperialists supported Tito in his plan."

Along with this oblique anti-American attack, the Army newspaper "Ob Anu Lidu" said it had become "imperative to consider perfecting the defense of our frontier," after German border incidents last August 27. The newspaper renewed charges that American troops had kidnaped 22 Czech soldiers and a boy and had taken them into Germany for questioning.

The American Army and the United States Embassy here said the incident August 27 was only a case of trespassing in which the Czechs were set back across the border.

Friction between the state and the Roman Catholic Church continued. Priests preached today on the opening of the new school year and told parents and children "Catholicism must be the leading guide to life for the youth. Youth must disregard any diversionist teachings." This was in reference to a charge that Communists were interfering in the education of priests.

Their attack on education along Marxist-Leninist lines was undeterred by reports from Catholic sources that Czechoslovak police had arrested two priests, a seminary rector and two nuns in the Hradec Kralove diocese of eastern Bohemia.

Fight Impends In Germany

Bonn, Germany, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—A bitter fight shaped up today for the election of Germany's first postwar president Monday.

As opposing party leaders apparently failed to reconcile their views, there was a possibility Theodor Huess, until now the likeliest candidate, might have to give way.

Huess, chairman of the rightist Free Democrats Party, is supported by a coalition of his own party, the dominant Christian Democrats, and the German Party, also rightist.

But he may not be able to muster a clear majority from the 804-man special presidential convention if the Socialists, second largest party, carry out their threat to nominate a candidate of their own.

Huess' position might be doubly jeopardized if the Socialist candidate turned out to be Kurt Schumacher, popular one-armed, one-legged Socialist leader.

Efforts to reconcile the views of party leaders, in a series of weekend conferences, appeared to have failed.

Christian Democrat leader and chancellor-apparent Konrad Adenauer, who entered Huess' name, tried to convince Schumacher the Socialists should either support Huess or abstain from voting.

Schumacher, whose Socialists have been excluded from Adenauer's governing coalition, made it clear his party will enter its own candidate if the rightists insist on Huess.

The special convention which will decide the president is composed of 402 delegates of the lower house (Bundestag), and equal number of deputies from the 11 state legislatures. The 42 members of the upper house (Bundesrat) have no vote.

German Town Hails McCloy

Rothenburg-ob-der-Tauber, Germany, Sept. 11 (AP).—Beneath ancient tower battlements today, U. S. Military Governor John J. McCloy became patron of the historic German city he once saved from destruction.

In the last-ditch fighting of World War II, McCloy, then Assistant Secretary of War, visited Gen. Jacobs L. Devers, whose forces were besieging the tenth-century city.

"I had never been in Rothenburg," McCloy recalled today, "but my mother visited it often, and she told me of its beauty and historic value. I hated to see it destroyed by force.

"I asked General Devers if this could be avoided, even though tough fanatic SS (elite guard) troops were dug in there. General Devers readily agreed. But the SS men were stubborn."

It took all of that March day to get them to surrender. Rothenburg's grateful citizens later advised McCloy he had been chosen patron and invited him to visit the city for formal induction.

Today, while a colorful fall festival was in swing, he was so honored.

McCloy tilted the traditional flagon of wine to his lips. In a moment he shook his head.

Pope Warns Unions That Abuse Of Power Leads to Slavery

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Sept. 11 (AP).—Pope Pius XII told labor unions today that misuse of power leads to slavery.

He also pledged wholehearted support to the "progressive spread of private ownership and medium and small enterprise."

The Pope addressed 1200 cheering and singing Belgian Catholic workers and labor leaders at his summer residence.

The Pope today warned of "the danger which at this moment is threatening the workers' movements in many places." This danger, he said, is "the temptation to misuse (we are talking of the abuse and not of the legitimate use) of the power of organization, a temptation as dreadful and dangerous as the temptation to abuse the power of private capital."

"To expect stable conditions for the state and society to arise from such an abuse would be a vain illusion, not to say blindness and folly," said the Pope.

This illusion and folly, he said, would be "doubly fatal to the welfare and liberty of the worker who would thus plunge himself into slavery."

The Pope said labor unions came into being as the spontaneous and necessary consequence of capitalism.

"As such, the church gave them its approval with the condition, however, that, resting on the law of Christ as an unshakable basis, they endeavor to promote Christian order in the workers' world.

"That is what your syndicates want: As such we are blessing them. The motto of the syndicates could be formulated by the adage —'heaven helps him who helps himself'."

The Pope told the workers that their conduct must be "a shining answer to the calumnies of the adversaries who accuse the church of keeping laymen on a leash without permitting them any personal activity and without assigning to them a proper task in its (the church's) field.

"Such has never been its attitude."

Polish Head Warns Clergy On 'Hostility'

Warsaw, Poland, Sept. 11 (AP).—President Boleslaw Bierut was quoted by the official press agency today as telling a delegation of Catholic priests he "demands that the clergy refrain from using the church for activities hostile to the government."

The press agency released the text of a conversation the president had on September 1 with the delegation whose spokesman said "our hierarchy has undertaken certain steps and we ask you to help us to make performance of our work possible."

In response Bierut declared his government would "do all it can to settle relations (with the church) on a basis of mutual understanding."

He charged, however, that words spoken by part of the clergy were "transforming the pulpit into some kind of political platform" and the Government would not tolerate the church being made a place of struggle by people embittered by social changes.

[In a letter to Polish bishops dated the same day, September 1, Pope Pius charged that in Poland "virtually all Catholic associations have been suppressed, religious teaching in the schools has been impeded, the free growth of religious or clerical institutes has been forbidden."]

Catholics Told Vote Is Duty

Vienna, Austria, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Austria's Roman Catholic Bishops issued a joint decree today making it "mandatory for all believers to vote as Catholics against an anti-church leftist dictatorship" in the October 9 elections.

The presidium of the Catholic Action, the joint organization of all Austrian bishops, by inference ordered Catholics to vote for Chancellor Leopold Figl's Peoples Party, and termed it a "sin if Catholics who are eligible to vote do not go to the polls to cast their ballot."

The decree appeared to contradict an Austrian bishop's declaration earlier this year instructing the clergy to avoid politics.

The decree concluded: "Catholics, vote as Catholics."

A spokesman for the Peoples Party said "a similar appeal will be made by thet Lutheran Bishops of Austria in a few days."

Foreign Minister Named to Succeed Executive Who Quit

Asuncion, Paraguay, Sept. 11 (AP). — Congress named Federico Chaves provisional president of Paraguay today. It was the sixth change of administrations for Paraguay in 17 months.

Chaves, the foreign minister and a supreme court justice, succeeds Dr. Felipe Molas Lopez, a 50-year-old dentist, who resigned last night. No violence attended the switch, which grew out of another internal upheaval in the Colorado Party, the only legal party in Paraguay.

Molas Lopez, who headed the democratic faction of the party, quit when the executive board of the party withdrew its confidence and sent a delegation to wait on him.

Molas Lopez had engineered an equally peaceful coup against provisional president Gen. Raimundo Rolon only last February 26. He inaugurated a regime unusual in Paraguay, forming a cabinet which for the first time this century included no military men. He had reduced police and army forces, permitted the people to criticize his government and extended an amnesty to political exiles, several thousand of whom returned to the country.

On April 17, as the only candidate, he was elected president to fill out the term of ousted President J. Natalicio Gonzalez. He was inaugurated May 14, expecting to serve until 1953.

Arab Vendor's Coins A Bit Premature

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 11 (AP).—An Arab vendor of old Roman coins near the pyramids has been put out of business because of a mixup on dates.

His coins were stamped 50 B. C. Police explained gently that 50 years before the birth of Christ, even the most brilliant of the Romans did not know He was going to be born.

a pretty garden with a fine view over the valley.

The contractor never lived in it. Luxembourg gossip says because he found it too elegant. He sold it to the German government for use as the minister's official residence. The Nazis made it their headquarters.

Some Luxembourgers insist that the house had a Gestapo torture chamber. Certainly it was a mysterious place during the war, heavily guarded by German soldiers.

After the liberation, all that investigators found were padded walls, a complex telephone circuit and a room fixed up as a Finnish vapor bath.

When the American Government bought it, George Platt Waller was the chief United States diplomat assigned to Luxembourg. He asked the Roman Catholic bishop, Msgr. Joseph Philippe, to drive out whatever evil spirits still inhabited it.

The bishop went through every room, sprinkled holy water and gave a special blessing.

Waller, an Episcopalian, explained later: "I wanted to get the devil out—he'd been there so long."

U. S. Traders Assured Cash In Argentine

An embassy statement said yesterday that Argentina is now paying cash for its imports from the United States and is regularly paying off its back debts to American exporters.

The Embassy's statement reviewed measures taken by the Argentine government recently in an effort to assure American exporters of prompt payment for their sales.

It asserted that the Argentine government is "conscientious of the debts contracted by its importers" and has adopted a policy that "entails sacrifice."

The Embassy pointed out that the government is now setting aside 30 per cent of its dollar income to retire back debts to American exporters.

"The system," it said, "has such characteristics that it guarantees importers, and thus also the American creditors, of fair treatment.

"In effect, the dollar assignments are made strictly according to the date of submission to the central bank of Argentina—at the time of the original transaction—of the importer's application for dollar exchange to pay for goods purchased from the United States.

"The central Bank of Argentina is in charge of the distribution of dollars and it distributes same as soon as its account with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reaches a sizeable amount."

Far East Parleys Set by U.S., Britain

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Truman Administration's new anti-Communist policy in the Far East will begin to take final form here in a conference opening Tuesday between Secretary of State Acheson and British Foreign Minister Bevin.

Acheson, it was learned yesterday, will seek British views and cooperation on at least four major points of new American strategy. Firm American decisions are reportedly being delayed until he learns Bevin's ideas and the extent to which Britain will go along.

Bevin, on his part, may raise with Acheson the question whether—if the British government has to cut costs—the United States will be willing to pick up some of the chips which Britain heretofore has played in Asia.

Major Far Eastern points which Acheson is expected to take up with Bevin, and later French Foreign Minister Schuman, are these:

1. How far and how fast should the Western Powers promote nationalism in the Far East as a powerful force against communism (which Acheson considers it to be)? General American policy calls for strong support of national movements which are anti-Communist.

At the same time Washington does not want to antagonize Britain and France too much by appearing to threaten them with the speedy loss of their colonial possessions.

2. Should the Western Powers go ahead on a Japanese peace treaty without Russia, and China's expected Communist government? State Department officials are of two minds on this so far, although the weight of opinion among Acheson's advisers appears to favor going ahead.

Work on the treaty has been deadlocked for months in a Soviet-American dispute. Associates said Acheson would not want to decide in favor of by-passing Russia without being assured of French and British support.

3. What political measures should the Western Powers take or advocate to try to contain communism inside China? One proposal sure to be discussed is a Pacific or southeast Asian pact, as favored by President Quirino of the Philippines.

Other questions in this connection concern American support for Britain against the Chinese Communists at Hongkong, the British crown colony, and control of Formosa, now held by Chiang Kai-shek's forces.

4. What attitude should be taken toward the Chinese Communists? The United States for months has been urging a go-slow policy on recognizing a Communist government, coupled with a policy of strictly limiting trade to nonwar goods on a cash basis.

Actually, under Communist pressure, the United States lately appears to be making a complete retreat from China. Britain, with ten-fold greater financial interests, and with worry over Hongkong, has been slower to yield hope of doing some business there. A coordination of future Western Power policies on recognition and trade is considered essential.

Auto Crash Kills 2 Students Returning From Country Club

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

AS BATTERED CONVERTIBLE is towed up River rd. by crane, wreckage forms background for still bodies of two local youths killed in the crash as a county official covers them with a blanket. They are Currell Vance, jr., 20, 3901 Connecticut ave. nw., and Herbert H. Mittleman, 19, 3726 Connecticut ave. nw. Another local youth was injured seriously in the accident. At right police officer stands by with effects removed from the boys' pockets while in the rear members of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad await the grim duty of removing the dead. The accident occurred at 1:30 a. m. Sunday on River rd. near Seven Locks rd. in Maryland and Herbert H. Mittleman, 19, of 3726 Connecticut ave. nw.

In Suburban Hospital with a concussion, a badly cut eye and possible fractures is Henry D. Jawish, 21, 3701 Porter st. nw., owner of the wrecked car.

The three youths, inseparable friends for many years, were preparing for separate colleges next week. They had attended a going-away dinner in their honor at the club as guests of Commissioner Vance.

Montgomery County police could not positively identify the driver of the car, but set its speed at between 80 and 90 miles an hour when it left the road shortly after 1:30 a. m.

The two dead were pinned underneath the car, every bone in their bodies broken, according to Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, after post-mortem examinations.

Vance died of a hemorrhage resulting from a crushed chest, Dr. Broschart said. Vance's body was identified by his father and taken to the Reuben Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda. Funeral services will be held Wednesday in Nashville, Tenn., the family home

Mittleman died of cerebral hemorrhage, Dr. Broschart said. His body was identified by a friend, Ellis Block, 3726 Connecticut ave. nw., and was taken to the Danzansky funeral home, 3501 14th st. nw.

Montgomery County police gave this version of the crash: The Jawish car was traveling east on River rd. toward the District at a high rate of speed. Between the Congressional and Burning Tree Clubs it ran off the left-hand side of the road. The canvas top was down.

Fifty-seven feet from the spot it ran off the road, the car struck a telephone pole, shearing it off a few inches from the ground. The car then jumped a 6-foot-wide drainage ditch nad slammed into an embankment 20 feet away. After hitting the embankment, police said, the car rolled over and over for 75 feet, landing wheels up back on River rd., and then skidded 95 feet further.

Jawish was thrown clear when the car started to overturn, police said. Police have not been allowed to question him since he entered Surburban Hospital.

Young Jawish attended Devitt School, 2955 Upton st. nw., then went to the University of California for two years. He was scheduled to leave next week for St. John's College at Annapolis, where he was starting his second year.

Jawish was the son of Henry K. (Heinie) Jawish, one of Georgetown University's football greats and a well-known real estate operator here before he died in 1941.

Currell "Sonny" Vance, jr., a track and football star at Wilson High School here, was scheduled to start his junior year at Vanderbilt University next week.

Herbert H. Mittleman was voted the "most happy" member of last year's graduating class at Bullis School. He was going to report next week as a freshman at Syracuse University.

Maryland State Police identified yesterday's hit-and-run victim as Kenneth James Veatch, about 40, 5125 Benning rd., Hillside, Md. His body was found shortly after midnight Sunday and was unidentified for 16 hours. Police matched keys found in Veatch's pocket with a wrecked car four miles away, and called the car's owner, who was Veatch's son, John McClain Veatch of the Benning rd. address.

Veatch was apparently struck as he was walking from the son's wrecked car to the nearest all-night garage in Bel Alton, Md., but police said they had no clues to the hit-and-run driver.

Two persons were hospitalized in separate accidents in Greater Washington yesterday.

Margaret Simms, 28, 7112 Allentown rd., Oxon Hill, Md., was taken to Gallinger Hospital with a broken right leg yesterday, when the car in which she was driving with James Colbert of the same address overturned near her home. Colbert said he lost control of the car when the steering wheel broke, according to police.

Three boys on one bicycle accounted for another District's traffic accident at 28th and P sts. nw. yesterday afternoon. Police said the crowded bicycle steamed down a hill on 28th st., and raced through a P st. stop-sign. The bicycle hit the rear fender of a car operated by Leroy T. Gaskins, 56, 640 Kenykon st. nw., a teacher at Blue Plains Industrial School, who was driving east on P st.

Richard Perry, 14, 73 H st. nw., who was pedaling the bicycle, was taken to Georgetown Hospital with possible fractures of the left hand and ankle. His brother, Thomas, 8, was treated for bruises and released, and 9-year-old Leroy Cook 307 G st. nw., escaped without injuries.

Auto Accident Fatal To Hillside, Md., Youth

A 16-year-old Hillside (Md.) youth was fatally injured in an automobile accident early today near Andrews Air Force Base.

Hospital officials identified the boy as Clarence Leonard Reh, of 1300 52nd ave. He died at Casualty Hospital shortly thereafter.

Members of the District Heights Rescue Squad who took Reh to the hospital said the accident occurred when the station wagon he was driving skidded on loose gravel on the Marlboro Pike, and turned over.

U. S. to Declare Confidence

a new basis of sterling-dollar trade, the three governments plan to set up committees that will work continuously on various phases of the problem. There may, in fact, be a permanent economic organization corresponding to the permanent defense groups set up under the Atlantic Pact.

Meanwhile, Cripps and Ernest Bevin, the British Foreign Secretary, will deal this week with some of the long-term effects of the dollar shortage—Cripps at meetings of the governors of the World Bank and Monetary Fund, Bevin in a review of foreign policy problems with Secretary of State Acheson.

Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France, now on his way here, is expected to join the Bevin-Acheson discussions Wednesday.

American help in bolstering India and Pakistan, and other non-Communist countries of southeast Asia, is among the subjects almost sure to arise in both the economic and political talks of the coming crowded week.

India and Pakistan together hold almost a billion pounds sterling in blocked accounts in London, made up largely of the pounds Britain paid for goods and services during the war. The two new dominions have been drawing heavily on these balances for goods and raw materials.

The London economist estimated last week that India and Pakistan together drew 157 million pounds from their London balances in the past year, as well as 42 million pounds' worth of dollars from the so-called "dollar pool" the British maintain in London for all the sterling countries.

Their withdrawals not only help explain why Britain's reserves of gold and dollars have been dwindling, but also show why Britain has not been selling more goods in the dollar market. British manufacturers are kept so busy making goods for Indian and other customers who can pay in sterling they have neither the ability nor the incentive to invade the much more difficult dollar areas.

The obvious remedy, one often urged by American officials, is for the British to tighten the screws and make it harder for their sterling creditors, like India, to draw on the London balances. But, say the British, any drastic action of this kind would have disastrous political consequences.

They argue that just as Marshall Plan dollars probably kept France and Italy from communism, so the sterling drawn from the London balances has kept India and Pakistan in the free non-Communist fold. Shut off the flow of sterling products to India, the British will say, and you will have political and economic chaos in short order.

Something might be done to check the drain if the United States, through dollar loans or otherwise, provided goods India and Pakistan hitherto bought with their sterling balances.

For example, a barter deal through the Commodity Credit Corporation might provide India and Pakistan with American food surpluses in exchange for manganese, jute, shellac and mica, all of which the United States needs, and all of which India and Pakistan have in great abundance.

The World Bank recently lent 34 million dollars to India for railroad development; it is considering another loan of about 41 million for reclaiming and developing food-producing areas. Admittedly World Bank loans for specific projects are not a substitute for the sterling India has been drawing from London for her general needs, but they will help take the pressure off London.

Pakistan is not yet a member of the World Bank and Fund and is therefore ineligible for a World Bank loan. The Pakistan government at the moment is haggling over the quota it would have to subscribe for membership in the fund.

But both India and Pakistan are regarded here as ideal areas for development, and the United States Government is increasingly aware of the need to help them, both for economic and political reasons.

Burma Likely Subject

The coming Acheson-Bevin discussions are expected to deal not only with India, the keystone of the whole non-Soviet position in Asia, but also with Burma, which seems at last to be emerging from civil war and chaos.

American policy in all Southeastern Asia is based on a recognition of the new nationalisms there as the best antidotes to Communism. As one sign of this recognition, the United States probably will support the candidacy of Gen. Carlos P. Romulo of the Philippines as president of the coming United Nations General Assembly.

Prime Minister Nehru of India plans to visit Washington early in October. By that time, it is hoped here, the United States may have made up its mind to shoulder some of Britain's former financial burdens in what used to be the heart of British imperial power.

Jewish Appeal To Canvass U. S. Areas

The United Jewish Appeal Conference yesterday adopted an emergency program to meet the financial and immigration crisis in Israel.

Measures voted by the 800 delegates from 34 States attending the concluding session of the two-day meeting at Hotel Statler included an emergency platform involving the immediate dispatch of flying squads of communal leaders to strategic parts of the United States to speed the remittance of all possible cash to the United Jewish Appeal.

Two resolutions were adopted dealing with the 31 per cent drop of UJA cash receipts used chiefly for the immigration and settlement of Jews in Israel and their relief and rehabilitation in Europe and North Africa. Cash collections are some 38 million dollars behind last year.

The first called for the launching of "extraordinary efforts" within communities to speed the collection of all funds pledged to the UJA. This included the initiation of supplementary campaigns for additional funds, the reduction of home expenditures for local requirements and making loans from local banks at once to assure "a substantial flow of cash."

The second resolution concerned plans for the 1950 campaign and provided that all conclusions and discussions at yesterday's sessions dealing with next year's drive be submitted to a national conference to be called in November. This conference would then make decisions regarding the scope of the 1950 campaign.

Edward M. Warburg of New York, chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee, presided at the morning session and William Rosenwald of New York, national chairman of the UJA and honorary president of the United Service for New Americans, presided at the luncheon and afternoon session.

Near East Support By U. S. Organized

By the United Press

The Holy Land Emergency Liaison Program—to be known as "Help"—has been formed to rally American support for relief in the Near East, it was announced yesterday.

Warning that "starving, sick and shelterless people create a fertile field for Communist intrigue," the officers said in their first formal statement that lasting peace in the Far East is impossible without relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction.

Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin of Lakeville, Conn., former president of the Union Theological Seminary, is chairman of the new organization. Representative Christian Herter (R., Mass.) is vice chairman.

Other executive board members include Edward J. Locke, jr., of New York, treasurer; Alfred M. Lilienthal of Washington, secretary, and Kermit Roosevelt, author and lecturer, and Lessing J. Rosenwald, philanthropist.

Dr. Bayard Dodge, United Nations consultant on its Relief for Palestine Refugee Committee, will serve as special adviser.

Coffin, Herter and Dodge estimated there are 800,000 Arab refugees needing immediate shelter and "the necessities of life."

They said the problem must be "solved and solved now" and that it was of "no concern how or why the Arab refugees came into being." The refugees were made homeless in the Palestine war which was won by the Jews.

Funds advanced by the U. N., they said, are so limited that "mass starvation could follow by the end of this winter without the extension of further aid."

New Group Offers Hope for Mopac Parley

St. Louis, Sept. 11 (AP).—Formation of a citizens' committee to bring representatives of management and labor together offered hope tonight for a resumption of negotiations in the Missouri Pacific Railroad strike.

R. E. Davidson, assistant grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and spokesman for the four unions involved, agreed to meet with the committee Monday afternoon.

Paul J. Neff, chief executive officer of the railroad, could not be reached. However, Russell L. Dearmont, counsel for the railroad trustee, Guy A. Thompson, indicated he believed the railroad would be willing to send a representative to the meeting.

Temporary chairman of the committee is Dr. Elmer E. Hilpert, professor of constitutional law at Washington University. The committee was formed at the suggestion of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The strike was called over a dispute about operating rules in 282 individual cases. The claims involve about three million dollars.

Meantime, trains of the St.Louis-Southwestern (Cotton Belt) Railroad moved again after about 24 hours of suspended service because of a picket line set up by Missouri Pacific strikers.

The Cotton Belt uses Missouri Pacific tracks between Dupo, Ill., southeast of St. Louis, and Illmo, Mo., near Cape Girardeau. Several Cotton Belt trains were halted by the pickets late Friday night.

Davidson called the stoppage "purely a misunderstanding" and apologized for the "error" today.

finders' compromise proposal will bring a settlement of the steel crisis.

Highlights of the fact-finding board's recommendations are that workers should forego a wage increase now and that both sides should agree on a 10-cent-an-hour package, covering pensions and insurance. The union had demanded a 30-cent-an-hour package, split between a wage increase, pensions and insurance.

Unofficial comment from steel sources indicated the board's plan is meeting with favor. One company spokesman called it a fair basis for possible settlement of the dispute. He praised the board for returning a report based on fact and untainted by politics.

Union sources, who can't be identified, also saw a possibility that negotiations based on the recommendations might very well bring a peaceful settlement before the new, indicated strike deadline of September 25.

A union source saw a big victory for labor in the board's belief that companies should pick up the price tab on pensions. The board's statement that pensions are bargainable under the Taft-Hartley Act also is construed as a labor advance since companies contend the industry's contracts with the union rule out pension negotiations this year.

The board's agreement with the companies against a pay boost is the biggest obstacle for the union leaders to swallow. But President Philip Murray of the union previously has made statements interpreted to mean he put wage demands second to pension and insurance gains this year.

The board rejected the wage-hike demand on economic grounds. Instead it advised a company-financed pension to give workers about $68 to $70 in addition to social security payments for a total of $100 at age 65. A company-paid-for insurance plan also was proposed with details to be negotiated.

"TOP O' THE MORNING" Now at LOEW'S PALACE

WHEN Paramount decided to produce "TOP O' THE MORNING," its delightful new hit, Bing Crosby was the perfect choice for a leading role.

And—when the script called for the repeated use of a dictating machine, Paramount made another perfect selection in the amazing Dictaphone TIME-MASTER!

For the TIME-MASTER is not just an improved dictating machine—it's an entirely new conception of dictating convenience and efficiency made possible by the revolutionary Memobelt!

So small you can mail 5 of them in an ordinary envelope, each tiny Memobelt record takes a full 15 minutes of crystal-clear dictation. Yet, the Memobelt is so inexpensive that you mail it, file it, or transcribe and throw it away after only one use.

For a delightful time, go see "TOP O' THE MORNING," now showing AT LOEW'S PALACE THEATER.

1954 Date Given

Jet Heavies Expected to Succeed B-36

By The Associated Press

The Air Force expects to have big jet bombers capable of striking targets thousands of miles from this continent flying in its strategic warplane fleet by about 1954.

Until then, experts said yesterday, the USAF's long-reaching, Sunday punch must be in the slower, conventional-engined B-36. For this much-discussed plane, the Air Force is spending about a billion dollars. Additional outlays probably will be made before engineers can complete and begin building a jet bomber to become the B-36's successor.

The air planners look upon the multimillion-dollar investment in the B-36 as interim insurance, to assure that the United States has in operation a long-range bomber during the possibly critical years until swifter but equally far-ranging jets can be produced.

XB-62 Looks Like Successor

At present, the probable successor appears to be the XB-52 jet.

The Air Force has assigned to the Boeing Airplane Co. funds for preliminary study and development of the XB-52.

Currently the bomber exists only as a wooden "mock-up," a comparatively crude wood and plywood shape of an airplane, standing on a hangar floor at the company's Seattle plant.

Reports are that, superficially, the exterior appearance of the proposed long-range heavy bomber resembles Boeing's B-47 medium. That plane, driven by six jet engines, has sharply swept-back wings like the newer jet fighters. Last winter, it crossed the country over a 2289-mile course at an average speed of 607 miles an hour.

The Air Force describes the XB-52 development effort as a "very active project," but refuses to disclose how far along it is.

Expenditures On B-36 Summarized

USAF officials estimate that about five years would be required between the start of a heavy jet bomber design and the time when production lines would begin delivering models. This places the probable time for delivery of operational planes about four years hence.

The Air Force supplied yesterday a summary of its expenditures to date on the Consolidated-Vultee B-36 bomber.

The B-36 is spotlighted in a House Armed Services Committee hearing, currently in recess, which already has given a clean bill of health to its purchase.

From April, 194:, when the first money was allocated for competition in a long range heavy bomber design, through last July 31, the Air Force spent or committed itself under contracts to spend $948,595,717. Officials said a revision of this estimate might bring the total to $1,022,000,000

Because the cost of all engineering work, instruments, tools and other materials is figured into the cost of the initial models, the first two "X" models of the B-36 came high—a total of $39,475,234.

Jet "Pods" Installed

Up to now, 170 of the giant planes have been delivered or are on order. The USAF first contracted for 95, then for 39, then last March for 36.

Into the overall cost of the program is figured the cost of installing jet "pods" in the later B-36 models—to give them a boost in takeoff and a reserve of speed to be used in combat.

The estimate of present delivery cost of a B-36 is about $4,732,000. The cost of those ordered under the first contract for 95 planes figured about $6,248,000, but trended downward as the volume production increased.

Depending on the size of funds for the next fiscal year, the Air Force has indicated its intention to buy 79 more B-36s.

This would bring the total of the intercontinental bomber fleet to 249 planes. Of this, less than half have been delivered.

Eichelberger to Talk

Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, former commander of the Eighth Army, will speak on "The War With Japan," at the Wednesday luncheon meeting of the Washington Rotary Club in the Mayflower Hotel at 12:15 p. m.

By The Associated Press

Representative Sasscer (D., Md.) said yesterday Congress should take a hand in the Pentagon row which has exploded into charges that Navy offensive strength is being scuttled.

Sasscer said he favored an inquiry into the roles of the Army, Navy and Air Force in defense and security.

Sasscer, a top-ranking Democrat on the House Armed Services Committee, indicated he feels such a review might do much to settle the long dispute between the Navy and Air Force over their respective roles in strategic air warfare.

Capt. John G. Crommelin, a veteran naval officer, protested Saturday that the Navy's attack power is being wrecked at the Pentagon. He said it is "being nibbled to death" and Navy morale destroyed.

The 46-year-old captain said that in speaking out he was throwing overboard his 30-year Navy career, but added:

"I hope this will blow the whole thing open and bring on another congressional investigation."

"I'd like to see this," Sasscer commented.

Crommelin said the Army general staff dominates the armed services, and Navy fighting efficiency suffers.

A Crommelin attack on the Tydings Law passed this year to tighten unification of the services was called "silly" today by its author, Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Crommelin said the law would help along a trend toward dictatorship which he said had developed in the armed forces.

Said Tydings: "One trouble with many high-ranking members of the armed forces is that they think of their own service alone to the detriment of others."

Crommelin had prepared his statement for an expected appearance before a Naval Court of Inquiry. The court is looking into the source of information in a once-anonymous document that caused a House committee to investigate the Air Force's B-36 bomber procurment program.

When the court recessed until September 21 without hearing him, Crommelin decided to release his statement anyway.

He told newsmen he was doing so because the Navy's fighting spirit is "going to pot" and "I just can't stand it any longer."

Concerning that, Sasscer said the differences within the military should be watched carefully "in order that the enthusiasm of one branch of the armed services doesn't subjugate, scuttle and destroy the spirit and morale of the other branches."

Making clear that he was not weighing Crommelin's statement specifically, Sasscer did say that he thought such officers are entitled to let their opinions be known. Further, he said:

"Care should be taken that a differentiation is made between scurrilous and unfounded statements and an honest expression of opinion by Navy officers lest valuable officers be purged and their services lost."

The House committee recessed its hearings until October 5.

Capt. S. B. D. Wood, judge advocate for the Navy court, said today that Crommelin will be called upon to testify when the court reconvenes September 21.

this session once the authorization bill passes.

Traditionally, congressional adjournments have been keyed to passage of the last money measure. At the rate appropriations machinery has been functioning, Capitol veterans say Congress can't even consider calling it a day until well into October.

Of the two bills now in conference, Army civil functions, involving many billions in public works, have been engaged since June and conferees are hardly speaking to each other.

Senators Standing Pat

The voted $593,292,270 for civil functions, and the Senate $751,440,690, against a budgeted $772,458,220. House conferees are talking because the Senate voted to start some projects not itemized in the budget. Senators are standing pat, saying they kept their bill well below the budget total and are entitled to choose between old and new projects.

Only other bill in conference, and almost as badly jammed, is the foreign aid bill carrying urgent Marshall Plan funds. The House voted $5,617,470,000, with authority to spend most of it in 10 months, and the Senate voted $5,647,724,000 for 12 months.

Strangely, House and Senate foreign aid conferees haven't been scrapping over money differences. What's holding foreign aid up is flat House refusal to accept two Senate "riders," opposed by the Administration. One continues the joint "Watchdog" committee and the other forces a "review" of German plants to be dismantled.

Awaiting Conference

The following three bills haven't even been sent to conference, and can't be, until the House returns in 10 days:

National defense bill. The President asked $13,248,960,700. The House voted $13,272,815,800, and the Senate, $12,731,834,478. Chief issue is the 70-group Air Force fund added by the House.

Interior Department bill. The President asked $624,810,436. The House voted $536,461,908 and the Senate $595,262,257.

Third deficiency bill. The President asked $214,730,794. The House approved $127,032,243 and the Senate $193,078,469.

Nine Fliers Go Payless in Financial Mixup Following Hybla Air Show

Nine flyers, including ace stunt pilot Woody Edmondson of Lynchburg, Va., were surprised victims of a financial mix-up last night which left them payless after putting on an air show at the Hybla Valley Airport.

Rex English, operator of the Trans-American Air Shows, which supplied most of the pilots and planes, last night claimed he had received a verbal promise that his fee of $2500 for his troupe of seven flyers would be waiting for him at the airport office after the show.

When he went to collect, English said, he was told that the show's backer, a Scranton, Pa., promoter, had the money but was somewhere on the field. Unable to locate the man, English said, he inquired at the man's hotel in downtown Washington and found that he had just checked out.

English said Edmondson left for Richmond by plane last night without receiving $600 due him.

Parties to the contract covering the show were unable to decide last night who was responsible for paying the flyers. Representatives of the D. C. Department of the American Legion, which sponsored the show, declared it was not contractually responsible.

The Legion representatives, who were entitled by contract to collect the gate receipts, said they were merely bound to repay the Scranton backer for any expenses incurred after an accounting had first been made. Such an accounting, it was indicated, would take several days.

More than 6000 persons yesterday attended the air show sponsored by the District Department of the American Legion at the Hybla Valley Airport.

High point of the show came when Capt. Tommy Walker crashed a biplane through a wall—and walked away uninjured.

It was the tenth such crash that Walker has made. Prior to becoming a stunt flyer, he served in the Chinese, British, Canadian and American Air Forces.

A wing-walking act and other aerobatics featured the show, which also included a helicopter demonstration by United States Marines from Quantico.

Surplus Held Slim In Bank Insurance

By The Associated Press

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation said yesterday that its $1,065,000,000 surplus—used to support banks which get into trouble—is "by no means as adequate as was formerly thought."

The FDIC's annual report, sent to Congress yesterday, discloses that the surplus is increasing at about $120,000,000 a year, and the corporation has retired all the original capital borrowed from the Government. But it adds:

"Desposits on insured banks increased very rapidly as a result of war financing, and are now more than three times the amount when insurance under the permanent plan went into effect.

"The present surplus of the corporation is only seven-tenths of 1 per cent of the deposits in insured banks.

"The Nation has just passed the peak of wartime and postwar inflation, and it is not clear what the future developments will be."

The report, covering 1948, disclosed that only three banks protected by deposit insurance needed help in that year. In all three cases the banks' weakness were caused by embezzlements of officers—as was the case in eight of the 10 banks helped in the last four years.

The report urged all bank directors to recheck their insurance coverage against defalcation. The insurance should be brought up at least to the "fair" standard recommended by the American Bankers Association, it was stated.

Good News Seen for U. S. Economy

By Robert S. Allen

The President's Council of Economic Advisers has some mighty good news in store for him.

Its next report will—

Write finis, in effect, on the "recession" that recently was a matter of national concern.

Detail a very cheering picture of current business conditions.

Forecast continuing bright prospects for next year.

The council will report that certain "soft spots" still exist in the national economy. These are chiefly in New England and on the West Coast. But the over-all business situation is unaffected by these isolated factors and continues strong, stable and assured of more high-peak prosperity.

The Council will base its glad tidings on the following significant findings:

General construction is above last year's record level, and the outlook is for continuance of this pace during 1950.

Auto sales and rent expenditures are exceeding 1948.

U. S. Purchases Up

Government purchases increased from $40,300,000,000 in 1948 to $43,100,000,000 this year, an increase that more than offset the slight business decline.

Total movement of all goods and services approximates 1948 levels, while real personal incomes have remained close to those levels.

Early fall sales have shown a strong resurgence of consumer buying in all lines, including soft goods, such as textiles and apparel. Also, general inventory depletion has reached the point where extensive replacement has become urgent.

The $2,500,000,000 insurance dividend the VA will pay veterans during the first half of 1950 will have pronounced effect on maintaining consumer sales indexes at present levels.

Strikingly illustrative of the revival of consumer buying is what is taking place in the shoe industry. Three months ago it was in the doldrums. Now, the biggest producers report all-time record sales.

International Shoe Co., largest footwear maker in the United States, topped 25 million dollars in orders last month—11 percent higher than its previous one-month record in January, 1947. Brown Shoe Co., another St. Louis giant, also had a record month in August. Similarly, Consolidated National Shoe Corp., Boston, and General Shoe Corp., Nashville, had peak months.

The report of the President's Economic Advisers will also analyze the business decline earlier this year.

This will be attributed chiefly to a shift by manufacturers and retailers from "inventory buying" to "inventory selling." That is, they switched from operating on an inventory basis to a consumer demand basis.

In 1948, consumer pressure and fear of price rises induced heavy stockpiling. When the former early this year, eased off, inventory building halted abruptly. It was this sudden cessation that led to the "spotty" unemployment situation. While industry and sales in general continued at a high level, some indexes experienced sharp declines. Chief among them were soft goods and nonferrous metals.

Two other adverse factors were a drop in farm prices and in foreign trade.

The first, due to the outlook for bumper crops, led to a widespread belief that a general price decline was in the offing. This resulted in considerable withholding of consumer buying for a time. The foreign-trade decline arose out of dollar shortages, but has not been as extensive as generally believed.

According to statistics of the Economic Council, "real" unemployment has never exceeded four million this year.

Mass Birthday Party Held for 6 Brothers, Sisters

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Sept. 11 (AP).—A mammoth birthday party was held in Wilkes-Barre today for six brothers and sisters, all born on September 11.

The celebrants all are children of Mrs. Mary Carey, 73. An eighth son of Mrs. Carey also was born on September 11, but he died in infancy.

Celebrating today are twins Gerald Carey of Wilkes-Barre and Thomas Carey of Eastern, Pa.; Martin, David, Mrs. Alice Larkin and Mrs. Anna Riley, all of Wilkes-Barre.

A great grandchild, Alice Carey, born September 10, 1948, missed the charmed circle by just a few minutes.

Mrs. Carey and her husband, David, who died in 1935, were parents of 12 children, 10 of whom are living.

Morgenthau Improves, Wife Unchanged

New York, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Doctors at New York Hospital said today that Henry Morgenthau, jr., former Secretary of the Treasury, who is ill with pneumonia, is improving and is in good condition.

The hospital said that his wife, Eleanor, however, still was in serious condition. Mrs. Morgenthau's illness was not described.

Plaskett-Cranford Family Reminisces

The Washington Post

FOUR GENERATIONS among those who attended the Plaskett and Crandon families' reunion at Cranford Memorial Methodist Church near Lorton, Va., are represented here. (Left to right) Mrs. Wilson Powell, 28, and her son, Wilson Powell, jr., of Alexandria, Va.; her mother, Mrs. Edward Monroe, 51, of Lorton, and her grandmother, Mrs. Ernest Plaskett, 71, of Occoquan, Va.

Approximately 150 members of the Plaskett-Cranford family association yesterday held their fourteenth annual reunion and picnic near Lorton, Va.

Appropriately, it was the first Plaskett who gave Lorton its name, naming it for his boyhood home in Cumberland, England. And the reunion was held on the grounds of Cranford Memorial Methodist Church.

Yesterdays reunion opened with the singing of "The Church Is One Foundation" in the neat white church on Gunston Hall rd., of which the Rev. Oscar B. Good is pastor.

Highlighting the service was presentation of a new pulpit bible by the Plasketts and Cranfords—to replace a bible borrowed 50 years ago.

Beyond the church grounds was the old cemetery in which John and Mary Plaskett and many other members of the family are buried, and beyond that the original church built by the Cranfords before the Civil War on the site of the original Pohick Church.

Five generations of Plasketts and Cranfords, mostly from Fairfax County, Alexandria and Washington, crowded around the picnic tables laden with ham and chicken.

Family chat, horseshoes and a business meeting followed dinner.

Walter H. Cranford, of 1610 Suter st., Alexandria, conducted the meeting, and Mrs. Virginia Terry of 1365 Kennedy st. nw., Washington, gave her reports as secretary-treasurer.

Milton Miller of Washington is vice president, and Mrs. Mary Monroe Powell of Alexandria, is historian of the organization.

Serving on the refreshments committee were Mrs. Gertrude Plaskett, Mrs. Joyce Futch, both of Alexandria; Mrs. Almeda Plaskett of Lorton, and Mrs. Marguerite Logan of Pohick.

McCarran Set For Fight on DP Measure

By The Associated Press

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) said yesterday he is ready for the fight to begin over displaced persons legislation which infiuential Senators are trying to tear out of the hands of his Judiciary Committee.

McCarran said the present law admitting 205,000 by mid-1950 gives plenty of time to study the problem further. He made it plain a bill won't be ready this session.

But yesterday Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.) stamped "must" on passage of the legislation before adjournment.

McCarran said he is ready whenever his critics wish to force a showdown.

The Nevadan was out of town last August 24 when a bipartisan group of 14 headed by Lucas and Senator Taft (R., Ohio), Senate GOP policy leader, acted to discharge the Judiciary Committee from any further consideration of a House bill liberalizing the present law. He returned to his office over the weekend.

The House bill, Lucas said, would permit the entry of "many more persons with Catholic and Jewish backgrounds," and hike the number of entries from 205,000 in two years to 339,000 in three years.

The discharge resolution would, if approved, put the Senate in a position to act directly on the House measure.

Too Much Crime

There are some gratifying facts about the Police Department's report on crime during the last fiscal year. It shows an encouraging drop in auto thefts from 2042 in fiscal 1948 to 1543 in the 12 months ending last June 30. Over the same period the number of grand larcenies reported fell from 2302 to 1973 and robberies from 1551 to 1118. These improvements were made in spite of the fact that local crime reporting last year was keyed to the FBI's uniform system, whereas during part of the previous year many crimes did not get into the statistics under the department's old reporting method. It is also notable that 61.7 per cent of the crimes reported were "cleared," usually by an arrest, compared with 58.2 per cent in the previous year.

These favorable aspects of the report are sharply offset, however, by an over-all increase in felonies from 14,845 to 15,405 and by the gains in such crimes as burglary, assault and rape. It is nothing short of scandalous that a city the size of Washington should experience 4424 burglaries and 4300 aggravated assaults in a single year. And even if the increase in rape cases from 89 to 293 can be accounted for largely by the inclusion of lesser sex offenses in this category this year, as Inspector Truscott believes, the total is still a grave reflection on our law enforcement system.

It is difficult to believe that this volume of crime would be tolerated by a local government directly responsible to the people of the District. The 15,000 citizens who have been robbed, assaulted or raped or have suffered from burglary, grand larceny or automobile stealing, to say nothing of the vast numbers injured by lesser crimes, might easily be enough to turn the tide against an administration permitting such extensive lawlessness. At present no local citizen can make his protests effective, but we suspect that the increasing demand for home rule in the District stems in part from the high level of crime under the present makeshift regime.

Solomons' Sorrow

The economic earthquake that is about to occur in the little town of Solomons, Md., has its counterpart in many areas where military installations are closing or cutting down. As Reporter Edward Ryan has related in this newspaper, the financial blood of this Patuxent River community will drain away with the transfer of the Naval Engineering Laboratory to Port Hueneme, Calif. Although the Navy has temporarily postponed the move pending further study, the strong indication is that it will go ahead with its plan. Accordingly the outlook in Solomons is gloomy, for the fishing economy on which the town once depended has largely moved elsewhere or evaporated, and the nearby oyster beds themselves have been destroyed by naval activities. The Navy has been the town's main source of employment and income. Residents who have expended considerable money on facilities to accommodate and entertain naval personnel will be left holding the bag.

When military economies must be made, it is inevitable that some persons and communities will be hurt. The only way to cut is to cut, and the Navy maintains that the consolidation of engineering facilities at Port Hueneme will save money. Nor is the loss to communities in such instances unmitigated. Many localities experienced a bonanza from military installations during the war. Army and Navy camps were welcomed as a salvation in towns where industries were dying. With respect to Solomons there would have been a problem even without the Navy, for the Chesapeake Bay fisheries have been declining.

Nevertheless, the situation is pathetic. It should be a reminder that the military services do have a responsibility to consider the human factor, especially in areas where they have been the main industry. At least they can make necessary moves as painless as possible by advance consultation with community leaders. Beyond this, Solomons' plight is a test for local enterprise in finding and financing new industries. Ingenuity of the sort practiced in New Hampshire mill towns during the depression has saved many a one-industry community.

Steel Report

If the recommendations of the Steel Fact-Finding Board are accepted by the companies and the Steel Workers' Union, it will be an impressive demonstration of the value of this kind of governmental intervention. For it is quite obvious that neither the companies nor the union would have been able of themselves to reach an agreement based on the board's findings. Although there is still no assurance that a strike will be averted, it now seems likely that the present truce will be extended at the President's request. And postponement of an open break improves the chances of a peaceful settlement.

The board rejected the union's demand for fourth-round wage increases (1) because steelworkers have fared very well in getting increases in recent years compared with other workers and the cost of living has remained stable during the past year, and (2) because a wage increase in steel would probably be followed by similar increases in other industries, resulting in price dislocations that would have "adverse effects on the general economy and on the steel industry itself." These conclusions are supported by painstaking analysis of a mass of statistical data and detailed answers to arguments for and against wage increases presented by company and union officials. The board is also on firm ground in asserting that the interests of the country are best served by a general stability of prices, including the price of labor. For demands for wage increases under present conditions, instead of bolstering purchasing power, are more likely to lead to strikes that would arrest the nascent business recovery now in evidence.

In any event, the board's findings will stiffen the resistance of steel executives to demands for wage increases. And the union would, in our opinion, be fighting a losing battle if it tried to enforce its wage demands by striking. Moreover, a retreat on the wage front would enable the union to press all the more energetically for acceptance of liberalized social insurance and pension plans paid for by employers. As a matter of fact, acceptance of those recommendations are the price that management will undoubtedly have to pay for peace.

Again the issue is in doubt, for union demands for pensions have aroused almost as much antagonism as the demand for wage increases. Spokesmen for the industry have argued that the subject of pensions is not bargainable under the terms of the reopened wage contract. The board agrees, but says they are bargainable under the Taft-Hartley Act. The steel companies also oppose the union's pension demands on the score of cost, claiming that acceptance would spell bankruptcy for some of the weaker concerns. These objections are met to some extent by the board's recommendations for a lower scale of insurance and pensions than the union asks. But the board admits that its recommendations cannot be applied automatically to individual companies. It also points out that serious bargaining over pension plans would be preceded by an exhaustive study. In other words, even if the companies should agree to bargain about pensions, a good many months would probably elapse before negotiations could start. The prospect of delay may help to overcome company objections to pension proposals but by the same token, the union may conclude that a wage increase in hand is worth more than a pension in the offing.

In our opinion, the board has exceeded its terms of reference by laying down general principles for the guidance of industry in respect to social insurance and pensions. It assumes that industry—and specifically the steel industry—is under an obligation to provide adequate security benefits for employes so long as the Government fails to do so. Millions of workers have no such protection and cannot obtain it from employers who lack the resources for financing such plans. Social insurance is not the responsibility of any single class of employers, but of the whole people, acting through their Government.

Assuming that the amount of benefits will be adjusted to the capacity to pay of employing companies, we believe that the steel industry and other industries and their employes would benefit mutually from introduction of more adequate private social insurance programs to supplement Government benefits. They would improve employe morale and make for greater stability of employment. Tactically, too, the pension proposal was a wise move, since the board's efforts to assist a settlement of the steel dispute would have been abortive unless employers as well as employes had been asked to make concessions. That the board has done, realizing that if collective bargaining is to succeed, it must be based on the principle of give and take and that allowance should be made for the interests of the public in the terms of settlement.

Pay Attention

Most responsible Senate leaders have promised action on the military pay raise already voted by the House. But promises are likely to be ephemeral in the struggle to deal with the heap of unfinished legislation by which the Senate is confronted. Gen. Omar Bradley, in his letter to Senator Lucas, has done well to remind the leadership of what failure to act would mean. The question is not one of special rewards for military service but of meeting what is almost an emergency in the loss of career talent.

It is always possible to keep the culls, but the problem is to retain the able men who have been pinning their hopes on the pay bill. Military personnel have high expenses because of frequent moves; and recently they have taken a pay cut in the form of shorn away post exchange privileges and income tax exemptions at a time when most other salaries have risen. The pay bill is based principally on the study of the Hook Commission, which made a scientific overhaul of the haphazard military pay system to provide career incentives. Senate leaders who are conscious of how service morale would be sapped by a failure to act ought to take the precaution of giving the military pay bill a definite date on the calendar.

Wiley B. Rutledge

The death of Justice Wiley B. Rutledge is the second reminder in recent months that the Supreme Court is no bed of roses. Justice Rutledge was 53; Justice Murphy, who died in July, was 59. It may be that neither would have lived longer off the bench, but the fact remains that the duties of a justice of the Supreme Court put him under a terrific strain. The old saying that justices never retire and seldom die will have to be drastically revised.

Justice Rutledge's untimely end is especially tragic because of his increasing stature in the law. When he ascended the Supreme Bench, he had earned considerable distinction as a liberal-minded law professor and judge, but neither his experience as dean of two law schools in the Middle West nor his work as associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia had made him an outstanding figure in the legal profession. In his first years on the Supreme Court he usually aligned himself with the Black-Douglas-Murphy trio which was at that time pulling rather consistently together. His opinions sometimes suggested greater attachment to liberal causes than to the judicial function in cases which seemed to involve a choice between the two. As the years passed, however, his intensive experience strengthened his independence and deepened the reach of his mind into our basic constitutional problems.

His high regard for civil liberties was first demonstrated in the flag salute case and repeatedly found new application.

Some notable opinions bear his name. Of these none is more impressive than the dissent he wrote, with the concurrence of Justices Frankfurter, Jackson and Burton, when the court upheld a New Jersey board of education in using public funds to transport children to sectarian schools. Justice Rutledge feared that this would be a first step toward a merger of political and religious interests and penned an eloquent protest:

> Now as when it was adopted the price of religious freedom is double. It is that the church and religion shall live both within and upon that freedom. There cannot be freedom of religion, safeguarded by the state, and intervention by the church or its agencies in the state's domain or dependency on its largesse . . . The realm of religious training and belief remains, as the Amendment made it, the kingdom of the individual man and his God. It should be kept inviolately private, not "tangled . . . in precedents" or confounded with what legislatures legitimately may take over into the public domain.

Genial by nature, Justice Rutledge did not become embroiled in any of the court's feuds. Democratic and humanitarian by instinct, he contributed to the court a sympathetic understanding of a free society. His diligence and his keen sense of responsibility steadily enhanced his judicial reputation. Although he is not likely to be numbered among our great judges, his reputation for warm, human understanding and for independent thinking on the bench seems to be assured.

Justice Rutledge's death makes it necessary to revise the assumption that interpretation of the Constitution will necessarily remain for a long period in the hands of the so-called Roosevelt court. President Truman now has the opportunity of filling a fourth vacancy on the high bench. One other death or resignation among the older members (in point of service) would give the Supreme Court a majority of Truman appointees. That fact may well impress upon the President the desirability of selecting Justice Rutledge's successor with an eye single to judicial fitness.

American Diet

One of the problems in getting the world's starving millions fed is the breaking down of food habits and taboos, of nutritional ignorance and stubbornness. However, these same causes are also keeping many Americans malnourished in this supposed land of plenty. Dr. Oudia Davis Abbott, head of the Department of Home Economics of the University of Florida, has publicly reminded us that only about one American family in 10 has a proper diet, only four in 10 passable diets, and that this condition prevails among the wealthy and middle class as well as the poor. Speaking recently before the National Dietary Food Association, Dr. Abbott put the blame for this first on American ignorance and indifference and on lack of nutrition education in the schools. Other causes she listed as inability to buy the right food and inadequate production and distribution of it.

Nutritionists constantly warn that too many Americans are underfed, misfed, or overfed. Something possibly can be done by public action about the underfed. Education may help the misfed. We see no solution for the overfed. One trouble about good diet is that like good health it requires a lot of individual cooperation in the form of intelligence and character.

Fotitch's Record

I am reluctant to engage in personal polemics when the issues by far outrank the personalities. However, I am compelled to do so by the personal attack from Dr. Juraj Krnjevich, former Vice President of the Yugoslav government in exile and secretary-general of the Croat Peasant Party, in his letter published in your issue of August 31.

Mr. Krnjevich accuses me of having belonged "to that Serbian clique which ruled Yugoslavia between the two wars without any regard for political and personal liberties" and of being one of the stanchest diplomatic representatives abroad of the royal dictatorship which "paved the way for postwar dictatorship and tyranny."

To begin with I wish to state that I never took part in the domestic policy of Yugoslavia. As a representative abroad as well as during my service in the Foreign Office, I always impressed on my government the necessity of following a policy of collaboration with the Western democracies, whom the Serbs considered their traditional allies. In the fateful days of early 1941 I strongly advised my government not to sign the Tripartite Pact, which would have brought Yugoslavia into the camp of the Axis, a policy for which the Croat Peasant Party and Mr. Krnjevich as its secretary-general were the principal exponents.

In your editorial of July 6, 1946, dealing with similar accusations brought against me by Tito, you stated: "To be sure, Mr. Fotitch is a Serb, but his efforts were directed at the wavering Croats, particularly at Dr. Matchek, the Croat leader. He besieged American newspapers, this newspaper among them, to buoy up the Yugoslavs in their hour of uncertainty. Mr. Fotitch's efforts were successful and Yugoslavia decided to reject the role as bondslave to Hitler . . . He did a signal service and this is known throughout the Allied world, no matter what evidence is presented at Belgrade."

This is my record in World War II to which I may add that the ranks of 1914-18 I fought in the ranks of the Serb army and again at the side of the Western allies for freedom and democracy.

Instead of challenging my record, Dr. Krnjevich should remember that he and his party, by supporting the policy of collaboration with the Axis, were greatly responsible for Yugoslavia's signing the Tripartite Pact on March 25, 1941. Neither should he forget that as Vice President of the Yugoslav government in exile he never openly condemned the monstrous butchery of 600,000 defenseless Serbs in the independent state of Croatia during World War II.

Catholic Schools

I wonder how many of your readers can appreciate the significance of two news items which appeared side by side in your issue of September 8. One declared that a sizeable number of D. C. pupils will only receive part time training because of the overcrowded condition of local public schools, and the other item stated that the Catholic Diocese of Washington is commencing construction of a million dollar high school as well as a number of smaller schools in the District.

This latter expenditure represents a staggering free-will contribution on the part of Catholics to the public treasury whereby they are relieving the public at large of the expense involved in educating those two or three thousand youngsters.

It has been suggested—although not to be taken seriously—that the point could be well illustrated if the whole Catholic school system be shut down for just one year. Catholic children would still have the right to an education provided at public expense. Then let the cities, towns, and boroughs scramble at building over two thousand high schools, and almost nine thousand grade schools, plus the staffing and maintanance of these schools.

Of course this will never happen, and it seems clear that the parochial schools are accepted as legitimate units in the American system of public education. Yet there are those who say that Catholic schools are divisive and un-American breeding grounds of bigotry, etc.

Public funds have been distributed to so many activities connected with religion that it is clear that there is not and never has been a principle or tradition forbidding the assistance of religious institutions by tax funds provided those institutions are performing a public service. And yet there is a violent outcry from many quarters whenever it is proposed to help church schools with public funds—and not merely church schools, curiously, but any sort of non-public school. What the Constitution really forbids is the favoring of one church over another.

Central High School

From the beginning of the controversies, the Miner Teachers College Alumni Association has been in favor of transferring Cardozo High School to the Central High School building and is not in opposition to the movement, as is stated in your issue of September 7, 1949.

The eleventh paragraph of your article clearly shows that the persons appearing in opposition of the shift of Cardozo to the Central building for 2½ hours said nothing which could be taken into consideration at this time.

You stated, "Proponents of the transfer quoted liberally . . . the statistics relating to . . . Cardozo. The statistics were not contradicted by the opponents of the transfer." This is more than true. The facts were not only contradicted but were opposed by such foolish arguments that those listening soon became visibly disgusted with some of their speakers.

I feel that if justice is done in this case and facts based on statistics are properly weighed, that Cardozo should move into the Central building as of February 1, 1950.

Remembering War Dead

I was impressed with Malvina Lindsay's August 31 article, "Remembering the War Dead."

For the consideration of those she calls "the monument forces" I'd like to draw attention to a story related in D. F. Cannon's Explorer of the Human Brain, a biography of Santiago Ramon y Cajal.

The admirers of this great Spanish scientist and Nobel Prize winner honored him by erecting a monument in the Greek style near his favorite walk in Retiro Park in Madrid. After the great work of art was unveiled Don Santiago never walked through the park again.

I feel the story carries its own moral. SAMUEL LAFFERTY.

Fairfax Bond Issue

It is with sincere pleasure that I express to you my appreciation for the publicity which was given to our recent bond issue program through the frequent notices appearing in your newspaper. I consider that the success of the program was due, to a large measure, to the education of the public through this medium. Without the coverage that was thus achieved, I would not have been able to reach the majority of those who are to be affected by the program.

I want to particularly commend the efforts of Mr. Richard Lyons in this regard. He expended a considerable amount of time in learning the details of the program, and as a result, presented a very complete and fair analysis of it.

Egyptian Influence

Regarding the story in your issue of September 5, of visits by Egyptians to the American Continent thousands of years ago, I would like to add that more information concerning this subject can be found in the Book of Mormon, which contains a full story of two such expeditions from Egypt and Asia Minor to what is now Central and South America.

Many archeologists feel that it is one of the most acceptable explanations of the origin of the American Indians who are believed to be descendents of Ephriam, one of the sons of Joseph who was sold into Egypt, and how they inhabitated this land.

It tells of a mighty civilization, of events that transpired in ancient America, of a people who migrated from Asia Minor to the American Continent, of their culture and their religious beliefs. It describes their architecture, their methods of agriculture, their use of paved highways, horses and chariots, their growth into a multitude of nations and final destruction of themselves through warfare.

New discoveries of buildings, aqueducts and other cultures being unearthed show an unmistable Egyptian influence.

50-Cent Words

Your opening editorial of September 8, "Political Labels," included the thought, "Perhaps political speakers and writers ought to be required to append a glossary to their texts." Before completing the page, I was wondering why an editorial writer should be calling the pot black.

Your editorial columns of that date included such cuties as: Semantic quagmire, puritanical inhibitions, hyperbole, loftiest abstractions, defacto, freebooting expeditions, emotional fixation, unilateral and collective intervention, palpitating adolescent, embonpoint, Billy Watson days, artistic tableaux and doubles entendres. Page Mr. Gallup! What percentage can pass the test, please?

This is no attempt to bury similes, metaphors, irony, innuendo and 50-cent words. I merely doubt that they simplify the editorial page. Sheer volume of printed matter has driven many readers to the editorial pages. Yours is the job of explaining (and you do well at it), but at times you seem more concerned with turning the fancy phrase than conveying a simple idea. I am not allergic to dictionaries but the buses I ride never seem to have one.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Union By April

AN AMERICAN POLICY decision of incalculable importance is now in the making. It is being seriously proposed that the whole weight of American influence be brought to bear to promote what has always seemed a distant dream—a real economic union of the Continental nations of Europe. Moreover, the objective would be to bring this union into existence, not in seventy years or seven, but in seven months—by April of next year.

The drive behind this proposal comes largely from Paul Hoffman and his ECA. Hoffman came back from his recent trip to Europe with two convictions. The first was that only the most drastic measures could prevent European trade from seizing up, and the European economies from foundering. His second conviction was that the impulse toward union on the Continent was genuine and deep, and required only some catalyst to transform it into reality. Hoffman concluded that some form of economic union was not only urgently necessary, but practicable. On his return he discussed this conclusion at length with President Truman, and Truman enthusiastically agreed.

At the same time, ECA officials who have had the painful experience of dealing with Congress all summer—deputy administrators like William Foster and Tyler Wood, as well as Hoffman himself—have reached a further conclusion. This is that some dramatic and visible results of the ECA operations are essential. Otherwise, they believe, the mounting congressional resistance to ECA will certainly transform the third year's program into a marginal surplus-dumping operation at best. And ECA must go back to Congress for third year appropriations by next April.

MEANWHILE, the State Department planners have also decided that political as well as economic considerations demand some form of real Continental union. But they have concluded—and Hoffman and the ECA men agree—that inclusion of Britain in such a project is for all sorts of reasons impractical. All of these conclusions dovetail, pointing in the same direction—a determined, all-out American drive for Continental union.

No final, formal policy decisions have been taken. Averell Harriman, European ECA chief, is worried about the reaction in Europe to what might seem overt American interference in European affairs. Some of the free-trade advocates in the State Department's Economic Division are also doubtful on the grounds that such a union would work against free, multilateral trade. But despite these hesitations, a great deal of serious thought is already being given to what form such a union might take.

The sort of thing now being discussed is a limited initial union of Italy, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, with Western Germany and possibly the Scandinavian countries brought in later. It is not proposed that any attempt be made to level tariff barriers or allow the free exchange of populations, at least at first. Anything so ambitious would probably lead to the failure of the whole project.

Instead, what is proposed is the establishment of a single currency at an agreed exchange rate with all the participating national currencies, and the creation of a central bank. The bank would be capitalized, of course, in the new European currency, but it would also dispose of an initial revolving fund of 150 million dollars which ECA would make available.

EVEN THIS is far from unambitious. A common currency and a central banking system involve a transfer of sovereignty such as no nation in modern history has voluntarily made, since these measures sharply limit the control of national credit. It is hard to believe that anything so fundamental and far-reaching can really be undertaken in a few short months.

Yet the experts who favor this plan point to certain facts. In the first place, the Strasbourg talks have shown that there are already powerful forces working toward union on the Continent, though not in Britain. In the second place, there is the whiplash of economic necessity. The British crisis is only a more visible symptom of a general European crisis—continental dollar deficits are running at 2½ times British deficits.

So far this combination of circumstances has led to little but talk. But the stick of American pressure, astutely applied together with the carrot of an ECA offer of a 150-million-dollar revolving fund, might well transform the talk into action. No one argues that Continental economic union would solve the Continent's economic problems overnight. Yet it would be an enormous stride in the right direction. And it is at least encouraging that the American policy-makers are beginning to think in big, bold terms. It remains to formulate an equally bold and far-reaching policy to deal with the economic crisis of Britain and the sterling area. For if Britain founders, the Continent, whether united or divided, will founder too.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

White Paper: Chiang's Stranglehold

IN HIS introductory letter and his subsequent press conferences Mr. Acheson has been answering the partisans of Chiang who contend that we did not give the Nationalists enough help. He would clarify the issue if he addressed himself to the fact, as disclosed from one end of the White Paper to the other, that while Chiang was calling for American help he was always ignoring American advice.

Lippmann

On this point all the soldiers and all the diplomats—Stilwell, Marshall, Wedemeyer and Barr on the one hand, Gauss and Stuart and our Foreign Service officers on the other—were agreed. They were unanimous that until and unless Chiang could be induced or impelled to use American aid a little more honestly, a little more faithfully, and somewhat more efficiently, our help was not only certain to be wasted but worse than that, to entangle us disastrously in Chiang's inevitable defeat. It is a fair conclusion that in the judgment of all the highest and most responsible Americans who have dealt with China during and since the war that without Chiang's faithful cooperation, American aid was not only Operation Rathole but also Operation Boobytrap.

THE WEDEMEYER report is the answer to the Americans who say that we abandoned Chiang and betrayed him when we could have saved him. General Wedemeyer is supposed to have justified these critics. Yet it was he who concluded that Chiang was quite unable, even with large-scale American aid, to unify China, and that, therefore, he must abandon Manchuria; that in the remainder of China the Nationalists under Chiang could not defeat the Communists or even maintain themselves unless Chiang was put under what amounted to an American protectorate.

There is no support whatever, quite the contrary in fact, in General Wedemeyer's recommendations for the view that all would now be different and better had a few more hundreds of millions of dollars been voted, had some military and financial technicians been sent out, and, let us say, had General MacArthur been put where General Stilwell, General Wedemeyer, General Marshall and General Barr had been before. For General Wedemeyer, whether or not he was fully aware of it, was recommending the "solution" which has always in the past marked the end of a state—that is to say its partition and then the rule by foreign powers of the dismembered parts.

FROM THE beginning of lend-lease in June, 1941, to the White Paper of August, 1949, which marks the break with Chiang, the overriding element in our relations was that while we supplied the aid, we had no power to bargain with Chiang about what he did with it. Our aid, whether it was given to fight Japan or later to pacify and stabilize China, was always in fact unconditional. We could do nothing to prevent its being stolen, wasted, or misused. We could plead with Chiang but we could not bargain with him, much less compel him, to use it as repeatedly he promised to use it and as we thought it necessary or wise to use it.

This is the crucial point when we inquire into the American disaster in China — that we could not negotiate with the government which we were trying to save and to support. The crucial question is why we lost all power to bargain with Chiang. The answer, for which I think the White Paper contains abundant evidence, is that we could not bargain because we had become so irrevocably and so exclusively committed to Chiang. We had allowed him to feel certain that he was the only Chinese leader we could support, and that we must continue to support him because his enemies were our enemies. As long as he was sure that we could not withhold our support, he had a free hand and could brush off our advice.

CHIANG'S belief that we were tied to him so that we could impose no conditions was tested and proved in the Stilwell affair. In July, 1944, the decisive campaigns in the Pacific and in Asia had still to be fought and Chiang's military position in China was becoming rapidly worse. At that time President Roosevelt asked him to appoint General Stilwell to command the Chinese troops, and Chiang agreed that he would. But he did not carry out the agreement and, instead, he maneuvered until he persuaded President Roosevelt to recall General Stilwell.

The President may have felt that he was merely resolving a personal difficulty, caused by the fierce and tactless honesty of Vinegar Joe. But in fact the recall of the American general who had been nominated for the Chinese command by the President on the advice of General Marshall and Admiral King and with—I believe—the approval of Mr. Churchill, was an act of appeasement which fixed the pattern of our subsequent relations. When Chiang had learned how to get rid of Stilwell, he had learned the formula for getting unconditional American aid.

THE FORMULA was to make himself the one and only Chinese opponent of our principal opponent—of Japan during the World War and of communism in the cold war. The formula worked. During the World War he got rid of Stilwell and his unwelcome advice to use our supplies to fight Japan. Chiang was able to do this because President Roosevelt could not risk an open break with him. The President felt that he must appease Chiang as he felt that he must appease Stalin—in order to preserve the alliance. For Chiang was saying that if we withheld support, he would withdraw from the war.

AFTER THE war we made it easy for Chiang to continue using his formula. We did this by making ourselves the sole champions of China and by telling the world that Chiang was our only hope in waging the cold war against Russia as he had been our only hope in the war against Japan.

The White Paper has, so far as I can find by a diligent search, no indication that we ever consulted any other friendly ally, not even Great Britain, though her material interests in China are much greater than our own. There is no indication that it ever occurred to us that the responsibility for China's future might prudently have been shared and the risks spread out.

Only now when the ignominious failure of our policy is upon us, are we undertaking to consult with our allies. Now that Chiang has collapsed we are firmly withholding support with a view to recovering our independence of action in the Far East. But until the disaster had occurred, we treated China exclusively as an American sphere of influence and we treated Chiang as exclusively the steward of Chinese sovereignty. Thus our diplomacy became constricted to the narrow and hopeless task of trying to persuade Chiang to reform and become worthy of the mission we had assigned to him.

No elbow room was left for bargaining with Chiang or for making contact with other leaders of the Chinese nation, or for regulating the consequences of the Chinese civil war within an international system, or for disentangling ourselves from the disaster which we knew was to come. The narrowness, the sterility and the exclusiveness of our China policy brought it about that Chiang's destiny became our destiny in China.

And so, when he went down, he took us down with him, like a drowning man who has a stranglehold upon his rescuer.

IF WE are to learn something useful for the future from this painful history, we cannot accept readily, we shall at least have to examine critically, Mr. Acheson's claim that our China policy was essentially right, and that the result was beyond our control. A disastrous failure of this magnitude calls for inquiry and it should be pursued in the manner of statesmen forming a policy rather than of a lawyer seeking a verdict for his client.

The inquiry might well begin with a study of the causes and the remedies for Chiang's stranglehold on American policy. For China may not be the only country where we shall find ourselves in the predicament of Secretary Marshall:—

He and all his predecessors in China had learned that they could not lead or influence effectively the government we were supporting;

As a matter of principle and also because the costs were exorbitant and the risks were incalculable, Secretary Marshall could not intervene in order to take control of that government;

Yet he felt he could not detach the American interest in China from Chiang's government;

He had to wait, knowing the disaster which was coming, until the connection was severed by the total defeat and collapse of Chiang's government;

Thus we had lost our power, our influence, and our independence in the land we had championed and befriended;

And we were irretrievably entangled with the inglorious fate of a government which had succeeded only in making anti-communism and Americanism synonymous in China with its own incompetence, corruption and reaction.

INQUIRY into the American predicament will not undo the disaster which has followed it. But were the full story developed with a view to learning its lessons, it might teach us something, something worth keeping very much in mind in, say, western Germany, Japan, and in the weak and disorderly countries where, it is being said, we must hurry to intervene.

In the desert terrain between the northern coast of Australia and the Roper River they found a "city" fashioned by wind and storm from great cliffs of limestone, with "battlements, towers, walls, streets and minarets extending over 100 square miles."

The scientists said the area was known as the age-old "corroboree" ground of the aborigines "who today eat live snakes but fear to enter the city or even to discuss it."

The aborigines regard the city as the abode of the spirit Boorooinji, a 'proper cheeky fella' who would eat any human or animal entering the city boundaries."

The scientists said "at night the city glowed with a eerie luminescent light which could be radioactive in origin. The aborigines were terrified at this phenomenon and sat at all times with their backs to it."

Reports on the scientific discoveries were not made available for publication except for the terse paragraph. "In the interests of national defense further exploration and research is considered necessary.

'Bandits' Cause Chinese Reds To Divert Troops, Report Says

By Fred Hampson

(Dispatches from Shanghai are censored by the Communist Military.)

Shanghai, Sept. 11 (AP).—Some observers are beginning to wonder whether the Red military advance toward Canton may have been slowed by diversion of substantial Communist forces to suppress what the Reds call "bandits."

Communist reports indicate uprisings have pestered vast Red occupied areas all the way from Mancuria to the Kwantung border in south China.

The bandits have been especially troublesome in north Anhwei, Honan and Kiangsu provinces.

The North Anhwei Daily was quoted by the Shanghai Communist paper "Liberation Daily" as calling for "general mobilization to wipe out bandits."

The article said at the outset the Communists had overlooked the importance of "antibandit" campaigns; policy toward the bandits was "too drastic at first and too loose later," and "antibandit" campaigns have not been well coordinated.

Practically every ruler of China has used these elements as allies and later has had trouble with them.

The North Anhwei paper said that in the past few months in its area there had been 301 fights in which 1584 "bandits" had been killed, 7534 captured, and many heavy and light weapons seized.

Miss Wong's Piano Recital Opens Series

By Paul Hume

Soonkin Wong opened the National Gallery concert series last night with a piano recital.

More than opening the National Gallery series, hers was the initial program of the entire coming season. To Mozart's Sonata in A Minor went the honor of sounding the first call to duty for the city's audiences. A large and eager audience greeted Miss Wong.

Her playing has the same characteristics that marked her first appearances here last year. She is more at home stylistically in music of the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries than in the more restrained works of the eighteenth. Arnold Bax's "What the Minstrel Told Us" was far more meaningful last night than the Mozart sonata preceding it.

Bax has written English harmonies around a folk tune, clothing the whole in impressionist tone color. It is a good piece and an encouraging novelty for the first concert of the year. Perpetual Motions, a Presto, and a Novelette of Poulenc followed. These, like the Mozart, lacked variety of color, though no problem of fleetness disturbed the young pianist.

Her chief problems seem to be the acquisition of the same accuracy in articulating each note that she has achieved in playing the big, difficult passages. We must always make allowances for the Gallery acoustics. Still there were too many pages in which it was impossible to distinguish precisely what was happenng.

Mily Balakirew's Islamey is one of the test pieces of piano repertoire. Here it was more apparent than ever that Miss Wong is not daunted by technical problems. But Islamey is no respecter of the gender of the player. It demands a big masculine sweep. It was often beautiful last night but seldom sufficiently powerful.

Miss Wong concluded with another of the big tests: Brahms' Paganini Variations made familiar in her performances of it last year, and three pieces by Chopin.

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 11 (AP). Cancer experts today launched a five-point plan to find silent lethal cancers early and save millions of people now destined to die of the disease.

Their decisions came at the end of the first conference on cancer detection sponsored by the American Cancer Society. It brought 60 experts together to seek better ways of finding cancer early. Most cancers now can be cured if they are found soon enough.

Their decisions:

1. Try every way to find a simple test for cancer.

Four blood tests that might be good were discussed. For the first time this search, once regarded as a crackpot hope, is to get full support.

2. Make every doctor's office a cancer-detection clinic. It could be done if the doctor makes the right kinds of tests.

3. Improve cancer detection centers.

4. Cooperate in tuberculosis chest X-rays surveys. These surveys to spot TB sometimes show shadows that are lung cancer.

5. Use statistics better and more widely to learn facts and trends in cancer.

District Plans United Nations Day Observance

Plans for observing the fourth annual United Nations Week in the District were announced yesterday by Melvin Hildreth, chairman of the District of Columbia Citizens' Committee for United Nations Day.

The week-long observance will begin Monday October 17 and end on United Nations Day, Monday October 24. Events in Washington will include special exhibits at the Smithsonian Institution, the Library of Congress and other Government centers.

On Sunday, October 23, ceremonies will be held at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery, under the auspices of several veteran groups and on United Nations Day, October 24, flags of the 59 member nations will be flown on Pennsylvania ave. in front of the White House.

Sulphuric Acid Fumes Plague Boston Suburbs

Everett, Mass., Sept. 11 (U.P.). Thousands of alarmed residents of two nearby Greater Boston communities telephoned police today when a chemical vat leak sent clouds of sulphuric acid fumes over their homes.

Some 3000 gallons of the acid escaped from a tank at the Monsanto Chemical Co. plant here, vaporized and caused coughing and eye irritation for nearly four hours among residents of nearby Somerville and Medford.

The odor was detected in several other communities but was not strong enough to cause other discomfort.

State Chemist Joseph T. Walker said there was no danger from the fumes.

Seven Church of England Bishops Participate in Area Services

Seven bishops of the Church of England yesterday participated in services at Greater Washington Episcopal churches before leaving here for Williamsburg, Va.

The bishops, part of a delegation of 12 Anglican clergymen visiting the United States to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the translation of the Book of Common Prayer, will celebrate Holy Communion today at Jamestown, Va., site of the first English settlement in North America.

After participating in the Eucharistic Congress at Williamburg, the bishops will go to New York for a similar congress at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and later will visit some of the major cities in the United States. They will attend the triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church at San Francisco late this month.

At the Church of the Ascension and St. Agnes, 12th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., two of the bishops opened the series of congresses, sponsored by the American Church Union, at a solemn high mass and service of witness. The Right Rev. John C. Wand, Lord Bishop of London, presided, and the Right Rev. William James Hughes, Bishop of Barbados, was the preacher.

The Most Rev. John C. H. How, Primus of Scotland, was the preacher at the morning service at the Washington Cathedral.

Other churches at which the prelates preached were: The Lord Bishop of Oxford at All Saints, Chevy Chase, Md.; the Bishop of British Honduras at St. Paul's, 917 23d st. nw.; the Bishop of Puerto Rico at St. Stephen and the Incarnation, 1527 Newton st. nw., and the Bishop of Trinidad at Grace Church, Alexandria.

Seven Area Groups Schedule Opening Meetings of Season

Seven citizens and civic associations will meet this week, ushering in the annual fall season of meetings.

Most groups will plan their year's activities, but at least one will be facing possible dissolution.

John Walker, 236 Walnut st., president of the Takoma Park Citizens Association, said serious consideration will be given at their Tuesday meeting to the continuance, reorganization or discontinuance of their association.

Walker said that the past few years had seen a decreasing attendance at meetings and as the Takoma Park area grew, interest in the association began to slacken. "It would be a shame," he said, "to have to quit after 60 years of civic work."

Groups with meetings scheduled include:

TODAY

Brentwood Terrace Citizens Association—8:30 p. m., Social Oyster Club, 1251 Saratoga ave. ne. New officers will be nominated for an October vote, also new program discussed.

Hillcrest Citizens Association—8 p. m., Baptist Church, corner Branch and Alabama aves. Discussion of possible change in meeting night.

Manor Park Citizens Association—8 p. m., 5th and Sheridan sts. nw. Ellwood Johnson, deputy director of Sanitary Engineering and superintendent of the Sewer Division, will talk on the area's storm sewers.

TUESDAY

Lamond Heights Citizens Association—8 p. m., Masonic and Eastern Star Home, New Hampshire and Peabody aves. ne. Discussion of program especially in regard to bus and sewage problems.

Takoma Park Citizens Association—8 p. m., Takoma Park Public Library, 5th and Cedar sts. Future status of club to be considered.

Summit Park Citizens Associations—8 p. m. Ann Bears School, Alabama ave. and 36th pl., se. Delegates to the Southeast Council and to the federation will be elected. Committee appointments will be made. Dr. Harold Melman will talk on Dog Week.

FRIDAY

Pleasant Plains Civic Association—8:30 p. m., Trinity AME Zion Church, 627 Park rd. nw. Address by Recorder of Deeds Morris L. Shepard, and installation of officers.

UNITED AIR LINES SALUTES A MASTER PLAN FOR THE ELECTRONIC AGE OF FLIGHT

The RTCA SC-31* System

TO most of you, RTCA SC-31 is a new and unfamiliar code in these alphabetical times. Yet RTCA SC-31 is neither a code nor a formula. It stands for Radio Technical Commission for Aeronautics, Special Committee 31—a group of men drawn together from every major activity in aviation, meeting to plan aviation development that fully utilizes electronic aids and other scientific advances. One of their major purposes was to improve the year-'round dependability of air transportation. Each man brought to the others his own ideas of what course that development should take. After months of unstinting and unselfish labor, this distinguished group evolved a master plan for the Electronic Age of Flight. RTCA SC-31 is truly the symbol of a great new era in aviation.

To appreciate what has taken place in commercial aviation under RTCA SC-31, recall the uncertainty of airline departures and arrivals during the winter, as it was a few years ago. Then note the tremendous improvement. One typical large airport gives us this example:

In the winter months of 1946-47 more than 3800 flights were cancelled at LaGuardia Airport because of traffic congestion resulting from weather conditions. Last winter, no flights were cancelled due to traffic congestion.

In the same winter months of 1946-47, only 13 per cent of airline flights operating under instrument flying weather conditions at LaGuardia Airport, arrived on time. Last winter, 79 per cent of airline flights operated on time in such weather conditions.

Similar improvement was accomplished at Chicago and other major terminals. In the coming winter, the record of dependability will improve even more.

What is responsible for this outstanding improvement? To a great extent, the answer is a realistic application of present facilities leading to a new system of all-weather navigation and traffic control devised by RTCA SC-31. The system was developed at the direction of the Air Coordinating Committee, in line with the recommendations of the President's Air Policy Commission and the Congressional Aviation Policy Board.

This new airway control system, first and foremost, will give America the means to operate the tightest-knit, most secure air defense it has ever had. In the second place, it enables commercial airlines to provide air travelers with a standard of on-time dependability never before possible.

Stated in its simplest form, the system uses electronic facilities, in the air and on the ground, to make the operation of military, commercial and private airplanes dependable under all conditions of weather. It is accomplished by new Airway Traffic Control procedures and by electronic facilities such as Instrument Landing System, Precision Beam Radar, Radar Surveillance and other well-tried airway and airport aids.

The impressive cut in schedule delays and cancellations is due to great improvement in air navigation control and more efficient handling of air traffic which the system has already made possible.

Even brighter than what has already been accomplished are the plans for expanding present electronic facilities and developing new devices to keep pace with the future growth in air transportation.

The work of RTCA SC-31 is a splendid example of what really can be done for the national welfare by men who harmonize their differences in the common good—making America stronger, more useful in the family of free nations.

Miss America Has Stage Aspirations

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Miss America of 1949 said today she is so stage-struck she once ran her father's tractor for 75 cents an hour to earn enough money to see a play.

Jacque Mercer, 18, a pert little brunette from Arizona's desert country, said her ambition was to be a "real dramatic actress."

Last year, she said, she asked her father for money to go to California and see a play. Her father, who grows cotton experimentally for the University of Arizona, replied that he would pay her 75 cents an hour if she'd run the tractor and harrow in the cotton fields.

"I ran the tractor until I had saved up enough money to see the play," she said.

The pint-sized beauty from Phoenix, Ariz., said she already had been offered a movie contract but hadn't yet decided whether she would accept it.

At her first big-press conference since she was crowned Miss America, Jacque showed all the poise of a veteran actress and refused to comment on anything controversial like French bathing suits.

She wore a black taffeta dress with a full skirt and a pink feathered hat.

Miss Mercer, who is 5 feet 4, weighs 106 pounds and measures 34 inches around the bust and hips, revealed that her real name is "Jacqueline Joy."

"But people had better call me Jacque," she warned. She pronounces it "Jack."

She called her best beau, Douglas Cook, of Phoenix, from the contest hall last night to tell him she won.

She said Cook was so excited he said he was "swinging on a chandelier."

Both are students at Phoenix Junior College, she said.

She said she would leave for New York Monday for a round of parties, and next week would go to Milwaukee for the Milwaukee Journal's Outdoorsmen Show. She will return home at the end of September to register for school. As Miss America, she is under contract to the contest sponsors for one year.

Runner-up for the Miss America crown was Miss Mississippi, Katherine Wright. Next came Trudy Germi, Miss Illinois; Sylvia Canaday, Miss Colorado and Jone Anne Pedersen, Miss California.

There's Civil War In U. S., Says Mrs. Robeson

Mexico City, Sept. 11 (AP).—Mrs. Paul Robeson, wife of the American Negro singer, told the leftist "Continental Peace Congress" today that "there is civil war" in the United States.

She said that was her interpretation of what she called "the battle of Peekskill"—riots in which more than 100 were injured during two recent attempts by her husband to sing and speak at Peekskill, N. Y.

Mrs. Robeson spoke in place of the singer at the final session of the peace congress.

Henry Wallace, 1948 Progressive Party candidate for President, declared in a message read to the congress:

"The people of the world will clamor for peace until one world has become a reality."

Police to Question Confessed Slayer In 3d Murder

Ogden, Utah, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Sheriff Mac Wade today said he would seek to solve a third murder by questioning Ray Demsey Gardner, who confessed two recent sex slayings in Utah and Montana.

Gardner signed a written statement that he strangled and criminally assaulted Shirley Jean Gretzinger, 17-year-old Ogden Sunday school teacher, July 20.

Last week Gardner admitted he killed Sue Horn, 39, Dillon, Mont., and led officers of her body on a lonely Montana road.

"From Gardner's conversation yesterday," Wade said, "we now have reason to believe that Gardner was implicated in a murder in the Middle West."

series of piecemeal announcements regarding the current survey.

But the fact remains that the current program is so sweeping that it includes a survey of every major United States seaport to determine the port's maximum tonnage potential. Another study deals with possible requirements for troopships and vessels for evacuation and repatriation of civilians as part of an even larger overall sea transport survey.

Each one of the present task groups is studying the adequacy and suitability for future use of regulatory orders issued during World War II by the Office of Defense Transportation. They also are studying the probable demands, both military and civilian, on each type of transportation in the event of war, the primary and replacement parts needs, and the manpower aspect of continued war emergency operations in each field.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, is general chairman of the over-all NSRB committee, but each one of his subordinate committees has been ordered to point out defects in the operation of the ODT during the last war.

When all the reports are in, the NSRB staff will prepare a detailed transportation mobilization plan for submission to the full board—composed of Cabinet officers except for the now vacant chairmanship—and the board, as it approves, will transmit it to the President. He may ask Congress to enact it on a standby basis, or put it in a desk drawer for submission to Congress only when and if a war emergency arises.

An over-all mobilization bill, covering not only transportation, but all other aspects of a full mobilization, has been written, but the Administration has decided not to ask Congress for its standby enactment. Meanwhile, it is being kept up to date, and the current transportation survey is one of the means by which this is being done.

For example, Guy A. Richardson, a member of the Chicago Transit Board, is chairman of the street and highway transport task group, which is studying the truck, bus, streetcar, private automobile and taxicab situation.

Gen. Robert H. Wylie of San Francisco, manager of the Board of State Harbor Commissioners, is head of the task group on the seaport survey.

Today's "American Frontier" is right on your own Main Street!

• YES, for every man and woman there are still opportunities freely open for the taking!

To know that this is so, look about you . . .

At the young shipping clerk who took two years of night school in mechanics, and now is a tune-up specialist down at the garage . . .

At the drug clerk who turned the idea of home permanents into a nation-wide industry . . .

At the woman whose health-building recipe for bread put her into a successful business and made jobs for many of her neighbors . . .

At the fellow down at the mill who took the trouble to learn more than his job required, and last week was made a foreman!

These folks and many millions more—whatever their politics and backgrounds—simply don't believe American frontiers are closed. They've found their opportunities right on Main Street! And they don't believe the "do-it-yourself" spirit is out of date. Not now . . . or ever!

Not if we recognize one plain fact:

America is what it is because it sees more in the "do-it-yourself" spirit than in a spoon-fed security!

In other countries people are coming to wait for things to be done for them. But in America we HAVE much more because we DO much more for ourselves! In no other place is there so much that is worth working for . . .

Seeing the evidence of this all around us, we keep on developing new skills, new occupations, new ideas. We make new inventions, develop new materials, organize new services. This means that our opportunities are constantly expanding! These are today's "frontiers." They are open to all of us. But for some there is need to re-affirm that the ceiling in America is still unlimited . . . to prove it by the stories of those who have the stuff to grasp their chances.

Hence this new series of advertisements . . .

For life insurance itself is a natural expression of the do-it-yourself spirit. It is itself an aggressively competitive Main Street institution. Life insurance has grown big because the need is big, because 78 million American policyholders depend on it. Some 584 life insurance companies actively compete to meet this need.

Each year more Americans of their own choice turn to life insurance for the security that helps free our minds from worry . . . that releases us to make the most of our opportunities. In this, the country's more than 150,000 life insurance agents themselves contribute significant service. It is their specialized knowledge which helps make life insurance do the most for the individual.

Yes, the growth of life insurance is in itself outstanding evidence of the continued vigor of the do-it-yourself spirit that still is America. People believe in life insurance, because they've seen it help so many people, so many ways!

"There are plenty of chances to hoe your own row . . . now more than ever," says Donald M. Clark, 25, owner of an aerial crop-spraying business in Delaware. "That's the great thing about this country—you can make your own opportunities, and make 'em pay off!"

"I'm opening up a personal 'frontier of opportunity' right here at The Timken Roller Bearing Co.," says Louis A. Karg, sales development engineer. "New materials and new inventions bring about new and better jobs all the time. So there's no riding on someone else's coattails for me!"

"Anyone today has a better chance to get ahead than his father did," says Glenn J. Graber, Hartville, Ohio, farmer. "Look at the new things to be learned and put to work on the farm and in industry! No reason why a man can't still go far on his own steam here in America!"

New York Beats Nats, 20-5, 2-1; Bosox Lose 2 to A's

The Washington Post Sports
Monday, September 12, 1949 13

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Jackie Robinson's batting slump is now the chief worry of Brooklyn Manager Burt Shotton. Not only has Robinson dropped 20 points in the past fortnight, but his hitting failures have affected his fielding . . . to hear the Redskins' apologists tell it, Harry Gilmer never throws a poor pass—it's always missed by his receivers . . . Al Schacht received a fat expense check for his trip to Chicago, where he staged his clown act on Jackie Hayes night. He immediately endorsed it to the credit of the fund raised for the sightless former White Sox infielder . . . both the Yankees and the Red Sox are thanking their stars that the Detroit Tigers didn't make their move sooner. The Tigers, with 17 wins in their last 19 games, would be good bets to take it all if the pennant race lasted 10 days longer . . . the Yankees' public relations men achieved a new high the other day, even in this age of specialization when they announced to the press box: "It is now raining along the third baseline" . . . the United States Ryder Cup golfers were considerably miffed when their departure to England from New York commanded no space in the papers, amid the excitement of the Yank-Red Sox series.

POVICH

THE WIMBLEDON people who counted on Pancho Gonzales as a box office draw next summer are dismayed at reports that he will join the pros . . . years ago, when Wimbledon was faced with the loss of Bill Tilden as a gate attraction because the USLTA barred him fo rtaking pay as a tennis writer, the British appealed to United States Ambassador Herrick to intercede . . . the Yankees, alarmed at the dim prospects of their 1950 outfield, already have made a $100,000 offer for Dick Kokos of the Browns . . . when Ellis Kinder of the Red Sox beat the Yanks in that pivotal game the other day, the Yankees could blame themselves. They once owned Kinder and let him get away from their Binghamton farm . . . Rocky Graziano will have a new experience this week. He'll be fighting Charley Fusari—a blond Italian . . . Art Rooney, owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, who is faced with another losing season both at the gate and in the league standings, is hopping mad at the National Football League clique that refused to merge with the All-America Conference last winter.

IT'S IMPROPER for a club owner to buy a player a suit of clothes as a reward for good performance, because it comes under the head of "special incentive." But it's all right for Cardinal Owner Fred Saigh to raise the salaries of six of his players in midseason . . . Bill Veeck is viewing with interest the declining attendance of the New York Giants and may yet buy into the club. During their last home stand, the Giants were being consistently outdrawn by Madison Square Garden's roller skating derby . . . Joe Louis, now a golfer in the low 70s, demands complete silence by everybody during his matches—and who would be so foolish as to disobey? . . . Eddie Yost, who made three straight hits against the Yankees the other day, literally is finishing the season with blood in his eye. His right eye is redolently bloodshot since getting hit by that bad hop two weeks ago . . . Bill Paschal, the big fellow who voluntarily retired from the New York Bulldogs the other day, is the kind of a fullback the Redskins could use . . . Johnny Lujack's big salary with the Bears pales beside his revenue from his radio serial.

THE NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE has relaxed a bit of its ban on television. In the New York area, when their are open dates for the home clubs, the league has permitted the Redskins-Cardinals game to be piped in . . . Eddie Stanky's friends declare that if he isn't given the Boston Braves' managerial job as Billy Southworth's successor, he'll ask for his release and join the Giants as player-coach . . . Yankee Manager Casey Stengel had a tribute for Ted Williams in the midst of the crucial Yankee-Red Sox series: "I'd never pitch to Williams with first base open," said Stengel. "He's not only the best hitter on that club, but the best baseball." . . . the Yankees, who have had a total of eight first basemen this season and wound up with Third Baseman Bill Johnson at the job, will make a strong pitch this winter to trade for the Nats' Eddie Robinson . . . last year's radio rights to the World Series sold for $150,000 with television rights going for $90,000. Television will cost the sponsors as much as radio this year.

Yanks Up Lead to 3; Dente, Stewart Hurt

Special to The Post

New York, Sept. 11.—The New York Yankees soared three games ahead of the Boston Red Sox today, sweeping both ends of a twin bill from the Nats, 20-5 and 2-1, while the Red Sox took it on the chin twice in Philadelphia.

The Yanks set a major league record in the third inning of the opener when they received 11 walks during a 12-run rally.

The second game was called after the Nat sixth because of darkness.

Washington almost tied the nightcap, belting out two straight doubles and a single with none out in the sixth but the trio of hits produced only one run. Phil Rizzuto started a game-ending double play to snuff out the rally.

Four Nat pitchers walked the Yankees to a record as the league-leaders laughed their way to a 20-5 win in the first game of two. The New Yorkers received 11 passes in the third inning while scoring a dozen runs, the free tickets exceeding past mark for a single inning by three.

During the walkathon, Outfielder Ed Stewart collided with Shortstop Sam Dente and had to be carried from the field on a stretcher. X-rays taken at Lenox Hill Hospital indicated absence of a head injury but he was badly bruised on the chest and neck.

Yanks' 11 Walks in 3d Inning Set Record

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—The New York Yankees set a major league record for most bases on balls received in an inning today when four Washington pitchers walked 11 Yanks in the third inning of the first game of a doubleheader.

Paul Calvert, Dick Welteroth, Enrique Gonzales and Buzz Dozier issued the walks to surpass the previous mark of eight held by three teams.

The Yanks scored 12 runs during the frame that took 50 minutes to complete. Pitcher Allie Reynolds started things with a single and also popped out to end the inning. The Yanks sent 18 ment to the plate, one shy of the major league record of 19 set by the Chicago Cubs in 1922, and tied by the Boston Red Sox last year.

During the walkathon, Outfielder Ed Stewart collided with Shortstop Sam Dente and had to be carried from the field on a stretcher.

X-rays taken at Lenox Hospital indicated absence of a head injury, but he was badly bruised on the neck and chest. Later examination showed Stewart suffered only head bruises.

Dente, although shaken up, walked off the field under his own power. The collision befell the two Washington players in the Yanks' big third inning.

Nat High-Jinx Helps N. Y.

The 41,800 fans just laughed at the Nats futility in the opener, but got a real shiver before the cellar team succumbed in the second game. In their last time at bat—the sixth inning—Joe Kuhel's guys would have tied it but for some bad base running by Ed Robinson.

They trailed 2-0 against Fred Sanford at that point. Bob Ortiz and Robbie rapped successive doubles with none out for one run and this flurry brought Joe Page into his fifty-first game.

Clyde Vollmer greeted Page with a single to right, the ball being hit so slowly that outfielder Cliff Mapes conceded the run and threw into second. But Robinson held up at third on advice of Coach Clyde Milan. Ed Yost then lifted a high fly to short left and Phil Rizzuto, the shortstop, raced back for it. He dropped the ball with his back to the diamond, but recovered in time to force Vollmer at second. Robinson still didn't score, though, because he fell down as he started for the plate and had to retreat back to third.

Given these two great breaks, Page poured on the steam. He induced Mark Christman to rap a double-play hopper to Rizzuto and the game was over.

The opener required three hours and two minutes of playing time and the Yankees' third took 50 minutes of that. Paul Calvert, Dick Welteroth, Enrique Gonzales and Bill Dozier, rookie from Charlotte, all had errant arms in the walkathon which saw the home team bat

Musial Hits 3 Homers as Cards Win, 7-5 and 7-4

Cincinnati, Sept. 11 (AP).—With Stan Musial hitting three homers for the day, the St. Louis Cardinals took both ends of a doubleheader from their "cousins," the Cincinnati Reds, 7-5 and 7-4, today before a crowd of 25,270. The twin killing enabled the Cards to extend their National League lead to only 1½ games as the runner-up Brooklyn Dodgers turned back the New York Giants, 10-5.

Musial clouted his thirtieth homer in the opener and then came through with two more in the nightcap which was called at the end of eight innings because of darkness.

The twin bill closed the St. Louis-Cincinnati season with the Cards having a lopsided 17-5 advantage.

The Cards had little trouble in the nightcap after clubbing starter Harry Perkowski, recalled from the Reds' Syracuse farm, for five runs in the opening frame. Ewell Blackwell came to Perkowski's rescue, with one out in the first, and kept the league-leaders pretty well in tow the rest of the way.

Dodgers Club Giants, 10-5; Reese Hurt

Brooklyn, Sept. 11 (AP).—A grand slam homer by Carl Furillo highlighted a six-run Brooklyn outburst in the seventh inning which enabled the Dodgers to whip the New York Giants, 10-5, today.

The victory may have been costly to the Brooks, for Shortstop Pee Wee Reese suffered a severe bruise and possible fracture of his left elbow when hit by a pitched ball in the seventh inning.

Reese, batting for the second time in the six-run seventh inning, was struck by a Larry Jansen fast ball. The ball glanced off his elbow to his head. Reese put his hands to his head and fell to the ground.

It was a 4-4 tie going to the seventh when Reese led off with a grounder to First Baseman Bert Haas. He was safe when Pitcher Adrian Zabala dropped the throw. Eddie Miksis moved him along with a sacrifice bunt and Duke Snider scored Pee Wee with a single.

Jansen, third Giant pitcher, was greeted with a double by Jackie Robinson. After Gil Hodges was purposely passed, Furillo hit his fifteenth homer into the upper left field seats. Another run came in on a walk, single, hit batsman (Reese) and an error by Billy Rigney.

Tigers Take 10th in Row

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Bob Swift's ninth-inning single scored Hoot Evers with the only run of the game as the Detroit Tigers won their tenth straight victory, 1-0, over the Chicago White Sox here today. Virgil Trucks scored his seventeenth victory by holding Chicago to three singles.

The 1 hour and 49 minute thriller before 5871 was Detroit's eighteenth win in the past 20 games. Bill Wight was charged with his thirteenth defeat.

Wight stayed even with Trucks during the first eight innings, yielding five hits during this span. In the ninth George Kell was called out on strikes before Evans singled.

Neil Berry singled past Cass Michaels as the Chicago second baseman moved toward the base trying for a possible pick-up. Evers moved to third on Berry's blow and scored on Swift's sharp single.

A Football Team Is As Good As Its Tackles

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another of series of articles on 11 leading college football teams of this area. Outstanding players on the various squads will be sized up, position by position, by MORRIS SIEGEL. Siegel has just completed a tour of the 11 schools whose teams he will write about

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Some years ago Harry Mehre, the old Notre Dame center, was asked to select an all-America team.

Mehre, then coaching at Ole Miss, rattled off the names of two ends, two guards, the center, four backs and then paused for a moment. Continuing, he said:

Siegel

"Put down the two Duke players at tackle. I don't know their names."

Somewhat startled, a reporter asked why the two Duke tackles.

"Because Duke is unbeaten, untied, and unscored on," Mehre replied, "and any team with that record must have two wonderful tackles."

Mehre's story illustrates to a fine point the emphasis coaches place on tackles. They're the guts of a football team, key men on defense and offense.

Without good tackles, no team is going far, regardless of the number of stickout ends, guards, centers and backs the alumni have recruited for their respective football foundries.

They're as necessary to a good football team as the ball itself, but 10 million times as hard to procure.

TACKLES MUST be fast, big and strong, with the emphasis on all three. They must be fast because more often than not they lead the interference. Strength is necessary because the tackle is the bulwark of the defense since most running plays are slanted either inside or outside of him.

Size is important since the small tackle will find the offense double-teaming against him and the good little man who can handle two good big men still has to be discovered.

In our football backyard, there are three such tackles. They're not only stars on their teams, but could do the same for any squad in the country.

Allen, perhaps, is the best. The vital statistics on the Duke captain read weight, 220; height, 6-feet-3. Down at Duke they believe Allen is not only a better tackle than Al DeRogatis, an All-America last year, but even better than Freddie Crawford, Duke's All-America of 1933. If so, Allen is quite a player.

COACH WALLACE WADE would like to restrict Allen's playing to defense, "but he's so good on offense that we'd be hurting ourselves if we didn't play him as long as he could take it and that's what we're going to do."

In the Duke single-wing scheme of things, Allen is the lead blocker, pulling out of the line to start the avalanche of interference the Dukes hope to throw up for their ball carriers. Allen must be fast to clear the road for Wingback Jack Friedlund, no ponderous runner himself.

Allen always wanted to be a back, a fullback, and almost won his point last year in the VPI game. The plucky Techmen had Duke bogged down to a 0-0 score in the last quarter when Allen blocked a punt and streaked 40 yards for the only score of the game.

"I was the whole offense today," he reminded his coaches after the game, "how about switching me to fullback now?"

Either Allen's argument wasn't persuasive enough or his running wasn't convincing enough, because he remained at tackle. Coach Wade, who frowns on playing sophomores, regarded Allen as a standout from the go-start. The Greensboro, N. C., star has the distinction of being the first freshman to play on a Wade-coached team.

ONE OF THE BEST things Jim Tatum inherited at Maryland when he came there to coach in 1947 was Ray Krouse.

The big Western High School boy was one of the chief reasons the Terps won seven games and lost only two in Tatum's first year.

Bosox Beaten, 6-4, 4-0; Scheib Hurls 2-Hitter

Philadelphia, Sept. 11 (AP).—Home runs by Sam Chapman, Pete Suder and Eddie Joost helped the Philadelphia Athletics defeat the Boston Red Sox twice today—6-4 and 4-0—and dealt the Sox' American League pennant hopes a severe jolt.

The A's also tied the league record for the most double plays in one season—198—making the final twin killing in the ... inning of the nightcap.

Carl Scheib pitched two-hit ball in the second game to salt away a lead set up by Joost and Chapman homers. Joost clouted his round-tripper—his twenty-second—in the third while Chapman socked his twenty-second — and second of the day—in the fourth with one on. That's all Scheib needed to gain his ninth win. He's lost 11.

Homers Win First

In the opener, successive homers by Chapman and Suder in the second inning sparked the A's to their triumph. Philadelphia piled up a five-run advantage in the first three frames to make the going comparatively easy for Joe Coleman, who recorded his thirteenth triumph.

The defeats dropped Boston three games behind the league-leading New York Yankees who slaughtered Washington 20-5 and 2-1 in a twin bill today.

Boston's only hits off Scheib were a fifth inning single by Matt Batts and Stringer's double in the seventh. Stringer had gone into the game for Bobby Doerr. Doerr suffered a torn cartilege in the knee and quit in the fourth inning.

Kid Gavilan Stabbed in Harlem Fracas

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Kid Gavilan, Cuban welterweight boxer, was stabbed but not seriously injured today in a Harlem street fight with three men.

Five stitches were taken in the 23-year-old prize-fighter's neck. A private detective, who came to Gavilan's aid, was treated for stab wounds of the face. Both men were sent home after hospital treatment.

Gavilan two days ago defeated Attilio Rocky Castellani, Luzerne, Pa., middleweight contender, in a 10-round decision bout at Madison Square Garden.

Browns Thump Colts, 21-0, For First '49 AAC Victory

Cleveland, Sept. 11 (AP).—The champion Cleveland Browns meshed a powerful passing and running attack today and defeated the Baltimore Colts, 21-0, for their first 1949 All-America Football Conference victory.

T-Quarterback Otto Graham and his crew got the ball for the first time in the first quarter when Warren Lahr intercepted Y. A. Tittle's pass on the Colt 42.

Then the crowd of about 22,000 watched Graham chuck a 16-yard pass to Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones, who ran the ball to the 4-yard line. Then Jones personally delivered it over the line in two rushes, Lou Saban booting the extra point.

The bulk of the work in the third period fell to Halfback Bill Boedeker. He caught the opening kickoff and ran to the Browns' 38, ran 32 yards off tackle on the next play and followed up with 6 more yards.

The payoff followed with End Dante Lavelli gathering in a 24-yard throw from Graham and stepping over the line.

The Colts couldn't do anything with the ball and finally punted, Boedeker returning to his own 20. Then Graham fired four successful passes, three to Lavelli and one 25-yarder to Boedeker. From the 8-yard line, Edgar Jones took a shovel pass from Graham and ran around right end for the touchdown.

Kiner Smacks Homers 45 and 46 as Pirates Turn Back Cubs, 7 to 3

Masi Also Hits One in Buc Victory

Pittsburgh, Sept. 11 (AP).—Ralph Kiner smashed out his 45th and 46th home runs of the season today, each with one aboard, to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7 to 3 win over the Chicago Cubs. The victory broke a five-game losing streak for the floundering Pirates who have won only two of their last 15 games. Phil Masi also homered for the Buccos with one aboard in the eighth.

Murry Dickson scattered seven hits in notching his eighth win against 14 defeats. The game brought out 9,851 fans, the smallest Sunday crowd at Forbes Field in two years

The Cubs were leading 3-1 when Kiner hit his first homer in the fifth, tying the score. Johnny Hopp was aboard on a force out. In the seventh, Kiner put the Buccos ahead with his second blow. Hopp, who had walked, again scored ahead of him.

Both of Kiner's homers hit the top of the wall in the visitor's bull pen, 415 feet from the plate. The big rightfielder is now five behind his record of 51 in 1947 with 18 games still to play.

Homers Aid Browns Jolt Tribe, 5-4

St. Louis, Sept. 11 (AP).—Jack Graham and Paul Lehner slammed out home runs in the sixth to help the St. Louis Browns upset the Cleveland Indians with a 5 to 4 decision today—the Browns only triumph in their three-game series with the Indians.

The triumph was the Browns' first in eight games.

Both circuit blows came in the sixth off the pitching of Al Benton. With the Browns trailing 3 to 1 and one out, Graham sent the ball out of the park. Roy Sievers and Les Moss each singled before Lehner came up as a pinchitter to put the Brownies in the lead.

St. Louis scored its other run in the second on a walk to Graham, double by Sievers and force out by Johnny Sullivan.

23d President's Powerboat Races to Begin on Saturday

By Happy Walker

THE million-dollar President's Cup Regatta speedboat spectacle, which an estimated 200,000 spectators will witness on the Potomac next weekend is a far cry from this event's humble beginning nearly a decade ago.

Back in 1926 William A. Rogers, then vice commodore of the Corinthian Yacht Club, gathered together a few of his speedboat cronies and decided that the Nation's Capital should have a stellar speedboat attraction.

Into a huddle with Rogers went such well-known figures as C. Melvin Sharpe, Charles F. Chapman, Admiral E. W. Eberle, Curtis D. Wilber, then Secretary of the Navy; Commodore Conrad C. Smith, Rudolph Jose, Edson W. Briggs and Ira Hand. Then and there the President's Cup Regatta first saw the light of day.

An up and coming yachtsman of the hour, Edward C. Baltz, was named secretary of the committee. This year Baltz is president of the associtaion, having served in that capacity for several years.

THE first major task of the group was to get the President of the United States, Calvin Coolidge, to sponsor the titular trophy, the President's Cup. This accomplished, the group raised some $5000 and commissioned D. C. Crain to design the bowl in 14 carat gold. Today the mug is valued at $12,000.

The event having become a reality, the first race was held on a chilly September 16th, with a stellar field of five boats entered. Horace Dodge's Miss Syndicate, R. F. Hoyt's Imp, George Townsend's Greenwich Folly, Vic Kleisrath's Hotsy Totsy and L. Gordon Hammersley's Cigarette IV, answered the starting gun.

Hammersley and his Cigarette IV captured the initial event, with an amazing speed of 55 miles per hour, speed which in this day and age are attained by the lowly outboards.

Subsequent winners of the classic, currently dubbed the greatest water show on earth, excepting 1929 and the war years, were: 1928, Delphine Dodge Godde's Miss Syndicate; 1930, R. F. Hoyt's Imp; 1931, Delphine Dodge Godde's Delphine II; 1932, Mrs. Ray T. Baker's Delphine IV; 1933-34, George Reis's El Lagarto; 1935, Herb Mendleson's Notre Dame; 1936, Jack Rutherford's Ma Ja; 1937, Mendleson's Notre Dtme; 1938, Count Theo Rossi's Italian entry, Alagi; 1939, L. A. Wilson's Miss Canada, and 1940, Mendleson's Notre Dame.

RESUMING the Potomac Classic after the war period, Albin Fallon, in Miss Great Lakes, took the 1946 event. In 1947 it was the Dossin Brothers' Miss Pepsi and last year Jack Shaeffer's Such Crust broke every existing President Cup of Gar Woods at 126 miles per hour.

around twice. The 11 bases on balls were three above the old record.

Calvert got no one out. He walked two, there was an error behind him and he was clubbed for two doubles. Welteroth passed three batters in a row, was clipped for singles by Pitcher Allie Reynolds and Rizzuto and passed another. He got one out when Catcher Jake Early picked a runner off base. Gonzales came on, walked four of the five batters he faced and retired Joe DiMaggio on a 400-foot drive to deep left. Dozier added the eleventh free ticket before retiring Reynolds, the eighteenth batter, for the third out.

Reynolds, who won his sixteenth game against four losses, had a 19-0 shutout at the end of seven innings and turned the game over to Frank Shea. The latter was clubbed in the last two innings, Robinson hitting his seventeenth homer with one on in the ninth.

Sid Hudson held the Yanks to five hits in the nightcap but four of these came in the second for the New York runs. Yogi Berra rocked his seventeenth homer with the bases empty and then Woodling, Mole and Rizzuto singled for the second score.

Heurich Takes Title, Beats Baltimore, 6-1

By Jules Loh

The Heurich Brewing Company, Post Industrial League and National City champs, annexed the All-American Amateur Baseball Association crown by a 6-1 thumping of Baltimore yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

The Washington representatives in the tournament earned the chance to play for the title by an 8-1 triumph over defending champion, Spring Grove, Md., earlier in the day.

Packers Edge Bulldogs, 7-3

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 11 (AP).—Ralph Earhart scampered 42 yards for a last-quarter touchdown today to give the Green Bay Packers a 7-3 National Football League exhibition victor over the New York Bulldogs.

A crowd of 5000 fans sat through a drizzle to watch the two clubs battle without a score through two quarters. Nick Scollard booted a 55-yard field goal for New York in the third period and it looked as if the kick would bring victory until Earhart was sprung loose.

Halfback Earhart made his winning dash in the last five minutes of the game.

Bettie Roland Takes 3 Firsts In 'Cup Swim

The President's Cup Regatta Swimming Meet concluded its two-day water carnival at Indian Spring Country Club last night, with Bettie Roland, 20-year-old local swimming notable, taking the lion's share of the plaudits.

Miss Roland, Pennhall Junior College graduate, took three firsts, the 100-meter backstroke, 100-meter freestyle and the 150-meter individual medley, and a second in the 100-meter breaststroke against a star field, including Gail Peters, Brighton swimming ace.

Miss Roland set a new District A. A. U. record in the 150-meter individual medley class, an eyelash ahead of Miss Peters, at 2:08.4. This gave the Takoma flash the President's Cup for the class.

COLLEGE—From P. 13

A Football Team Goes as Far As Its Tackles Take It

His finest games were against Vanderbilt and Georgia, which Maryland won and tied, respectively, the latter in the 'Gator Bowl.

"If Krouse were the vicious type," Line Coach Jack Hennemier said, "he'd be the greatest tackle in the world. He's got everything—size, speed and strength. If he would only get mad enough. Then again, maybe it's good that he doesn't because he'd probably kill the ball carrier."

At 240 pounds, and 6-feet-2, Krouse is one of the fastest men on the squad. Only three of the backs on this year's Terps squad can outrun him, which is no reflection on the speed of Maryland's back, but a compliment to Krouse's swiftness.

Against Georgia in the 'Gator Bowl game in 1948, Krouse was a one-man riot, breaking through to smear Georgia's great passer, Johnny Rauch, for losses time and time again.

ONCE AFTER a particularly vicious tackle, Rauch told Krouse: "That kind of stuff doesn't go down here, Krouse."

To which Krouse replied: "The only thing that doesn't go down here today is you."

William and Mary Coach Rube McCray says, "I doubt if there's a better tackle anywhere in the country" when speaking of Creekmus. That's praise indeed from a fellow who is usually gloomy about everything.

Lou enrolled at W. and M. from Woodbridge, N. J., as a freshman in 1944 weighing a scant 190. After two years in the Marines, he came back weighing 270. He worked down to 240, which he displaces nicely on a 6-foot-4-inch frame.

Like Allen, he's the lead tackle in W. and M.'s single wing and also plays defense—and how. Quite a dresser, Creekmur's picture graced the cover of two fashion magazines this summer, but he looks better draped around a ball carrier.

Against Oklahoma A. and M. in January's Delta Bowl game he trucked 70 yards for a TD with a pass interception. He caught the ball on the east side of the field, but ran down the west sideline, although the way was open for him on the other side of the field.

WHEN ASKED WHY he ground out all that unnecessary yardage, he replied:

"The coaches always tell us to run away from tacklers when we have the ball and I was hell-bent on running as far away from them as I could."

Krouse, Allen and Creekmur are the standouts. In Jim Hunt, 218-pounder who threw the block which enabled Bill Hawkins to score the touchdown that tied Army last year, Navy has a journeyman tackle who bears watching . . . Another sailor posibility is Bob Renneman, who resigned a commission in the Army to be a plebe at Annapolis two years ago . . . He's 6 feet 5 inches, an inch taller than Navy regulations permit, but Coach George Sauer says "he put on the inch since joining us" . . . VMI thinks it has a comer in Jack Frankeberger, 220-pound soph from Silver Spring, Md. . . . Virginia and W. and L. are shy on tackles . . . VPI switched its best, Jack Ittner, to center, and is counting on Bobby Hess, back after a year's layoff, to take up the slack . . . Georgetown also weak where it counts the mostest . . .

Barnes Wins, 1 up

Mild Upset Marks Golf At Argyle

By West McLean
Post Reporter

William Barnes scored a mild upset in the Argyle Country Club championship title flight when he defeated Frank Albosta, 1 up in 19 holes.

R. H. Mothershead defeated Line Johnson, 2 and 1; Roger Martino trounced George Black, 5 and 4; Lee Annan edged Willis Nolan, 1 up 19; Bob Harmon defeated H. B. Miller, 4 and 3; Tom Seenk ousted Joe Beckham, 2 and 1; Frank Miller defeated R L. Medler, 2 up, and Bob Kentner beat Arnold Praba, 1 up.

In the women's championship, Betty Garber advanced with a 2 and 1 win over Hazel Beall; Mrs. Ruth Mothershead beat Amy Mahin, 2 and 1; Mrs. Helen Sasscer defeated Mrs. Dorothy Hall, 3 and 2 and Faith Clark downed Mrs. Catherine Thomas, 1 up.

KENWOOD—Larry Imhoff, defending champion in the club championship, defeated Fred Jarmon, 1 up while his final round opponent of last year, Maury Fitzgerald, was losing to Bill Bridge, 1 up.

In other second-round matches Jim Kruzberg defeated Ferguson, 5 and 4; Nick Hollander defeated Don Dedrick, 5 and 4; Tom Bost downed Tony Del Vecchio, 3 and 2; Bob Kendrick eliminated Joe Brunner, 2 up; Tom Wilson defeated Don Miller, 3 and 1, and Don Larson defeated Bob Cook, 4 and 3.

BETHESDA—Alan Sherier won the President's Cup by defeating Tony Popolaski, 3 and 1, and used his 75 medal score to tie Joe LaSalle for the medalist honors with 75s in the qualifying round for the club championship.

Sherier and Popolaski were even at 15, but Sherier birdied the fifteenth and sixteenth to go 2 up and added a par on the seventeenth, where Popolaski went over to take his 3-and-1 margin of victory.

CONGRESSIONAL—F. B. Bomar won the medalist honors in the qualifying round of the club championship with 71, 75—146. Billy Shea, 72, 76—148; Eugene Pittman, 76, 73—149; A. G. Dezendorf, 75, 74—149; H. F. Bachman, 77, 73—150, and defending champion Parker Nolan, 72, 79—151, had some of the other low scores.

PRINCE GEORGES—Nineteen-year-old Bob Miller carded a 79 on his second 18 to go with his opening round of 74, which gave him a 153 total, good for a fourth-place tie in the qualifying for the club championship. Miller led after the first round. Medalist was George Voigt, 75, 74—149. Other low scores: Bob Morris, 75, 77—152; Ed Bean, 75, 77—152, and Dr. M. L. Parks, 76, 77—153.

FAIRFAX—Mrs. Louise B. Sayers, 2702 Wisconsin ave. nw. scored a hole-in-one on the 190-yard second hole. She used a three wood for the drive witnessed by Charles Molloy and J. L. Brown.

MANOR—Bill Herson and R. U. Sherman carded an 82—24—59 to win the best ball twosome event. W. I. Hicks and Ray Fleming, 71—11—60, were second.

INDIAN SPRING—Joe Mudrick, 39, 44—80—19—61 won the Duffers Cup for players with handicaps of 15 and over with Dr. I. Rosen, 50, 42—92—30—62 took second.

WASHINGTON—Eighty was the winning number in the blind bogey event with Dr. W. A. Price, G. W. Calvert, C. W. Smith, J. S. Baldwin, E. S. Fay, R. H. Rife and E. X. Hurphy tying for first.

Ralph Bogart, Brownell Top Amateur Field

Albert E. Steinem, secretary of the District Golf Association, last night announced an entry list of 41 local amateurs, for the District Amateur tournament at Kenwood Country Club starting tomorrow

Bobby Brownell, champion for the last three years, and Ralph Bogart, mid-Atlantic and Maryland State champion this year, were installed as pre-tourney favorities to meet in the 36-hole final Friday in their first head-to-head clash of the season.

The Chevy Chase Country Club business partners lead the field of 41 top local amateurs into the qualifying round Tuesday and the 18-hole matches which will be played, two a day, Wednesday and Thursday, before Friday's championship match.

Brownell and Bogart will face stiff competition along the way to an expected final meeting from such golfers as Eddie Ault, Indian Spring; Karl Corby, Columbia; Roger Martino, Argyle; Col. Jimmy Wilson, Army-Navy, and Bobby Morris, Prince Georges.

Ferrier's 277 Wins Kansas City Golf; Metz 2d

Kansas City, Sept. 11 (AP).—Jim Ferrier of San Francisco won the $5000 Kansas City Open golf tournament today with a 72-hole score of 277, 11 strokes under par for the four rounds. He had a 2-under-par 70 today.

Dick Metz of Arkansas City, Kans., who shot a 71, finished second with a total of 281.

Ferrier, who had fired three successive 69s on the 6319-yard par 72 Swope Park public course, was out in 33, three strokes under par. He mixed in an over-par hold with eight pars on the back nine for a 37.

The heavyweight Ferrier picked up $1000 for his victory and Metz earned $700. Metz, who led after 36 holes with 137 strokes, played the final round in 35, 36—71.

Dave Douglas of Newark, Del., well down the list after three rounds, shot a course record equaling 66, six under par to vault into a third-place tie with United States Open Champion Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn.

Both Douglas and Middlecoff, who shot 71 today, wound up with 285 totals and $550 each.

Bo Wininger of Stillwater, Okla., topped the amateurs with 288, even par for the 72 holes.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo and Robert Kosten of Kansas City tied for second amateur honors with 291s.

Soccer League Meets Thursday

The Washington Soccer League will hold a meeting October 12 at the Y. M. C. A., 8 p. m. Thursday, in preparation for the opening

Eric Langford was elected president of the 14-team loop at the last meeting, with J. MacFarland, secretary.

Sugar Radio, league champ for the past three seasons and Maryland State Cup winners last year, will be back to defend their title.

Grace Lenczyk Defends Amateur Title Today

Merion, Pa., Sept. 11 (AP).—With an outstanding foreign threat adding spice to the competition, a field of 128 players tee off tomorrow at the Merion Golf Club in quest of the Women's National Amateur Championship.

If any contestant could be rated a favorite, it probably would be the slightly erratic defending champion, Grace Lenczyk of Newington, Conn., but the field also will keep a wary eye on Frances Stephens from Bootle, Ind.

Miss Stephens, a 33-year-old veteran, won the British championship this year, and a winner of that historic event rates respect in any company.

However, Miss Lenczyk will not be without ample competition from this side of the ocean, with such proven performers as Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, Ga., twice a runnerup; Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio; Dot Kielty, the capable Californian; and no less than four former champions.

These include Mrs. Julius A. Page, jr., of Chapel Hill, N. C.; Mrs. Edwin H. Vare, jr., of Merion; Mrs. Helen Stetson of Abington, Pa.; and Margaret Curtis of Boston. Marlene Bauer of Los Angeles, along with the above and Miss Lenczyk and Miss Stephens, was exempted from qualifying play by virtue of her status as National Girls' Champion.

The field is sprinkled with other outstanding contenders, including Helen Sigel of Philadelphia.

Marlboro, Plant Completely Rebuilt, Opens Today

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS:

Now that Marlboro is all diked out in new turf clothes don't be surprised if next year doesn't find the length of the running strip upped to 6 furlongs. There's a Maryland rule, for safety's sake, that only eight horses can start on a half mile track due to the short straightways. The limit is 10 on a 6-furlong oval. This gives two more betting positions and adds to the mutuel handle. Bel Air's business picked up with its added 2 furlongs. Marlboro had plenty of ground but did not have the time to work on the oval this year. Good opening day show down in southern Maryland. See you on the rail. BILL

1—Idle Tale, Gray Channelle, Chal Ann.

$1200 Purse To Feature 8-Race Card

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Marlboro's completely rebuilt plant will start off the final meeting of the Maryland half-mile season today when the field for the first race breaks from the starting gate at 2 p. m.

Each of the eight races has drawn a full field of runners, but chief interest with the fans will be the $1200 Savage Purse, scheduled as the day's fifth event.

The 5½-furlong race is expected to develop into a two-horse event between Robert L. Hall, jr.'s Tacaro Briar and J. N. Barnes' Miss Prime.

Tacaro Briar comes down from New Jersey with an excellent record. The gelding has been competing against $12,500 runners with fair success this summer, and there's obviously nothing that good in this race.

His greatest difficulty will be in making the sharp turns at this half-mile track, and, in that respect, Miss Prime will hold a slight advantage.

The mare has made only two starts this summer—because of an injury sustained early in the spring—and she split even on the pair, winning first, then losing at Timonium after being made 3-to-5 favorite.

The new Marlboro concrete and steel grandstand and clubhouse will be turned open for public approval today.

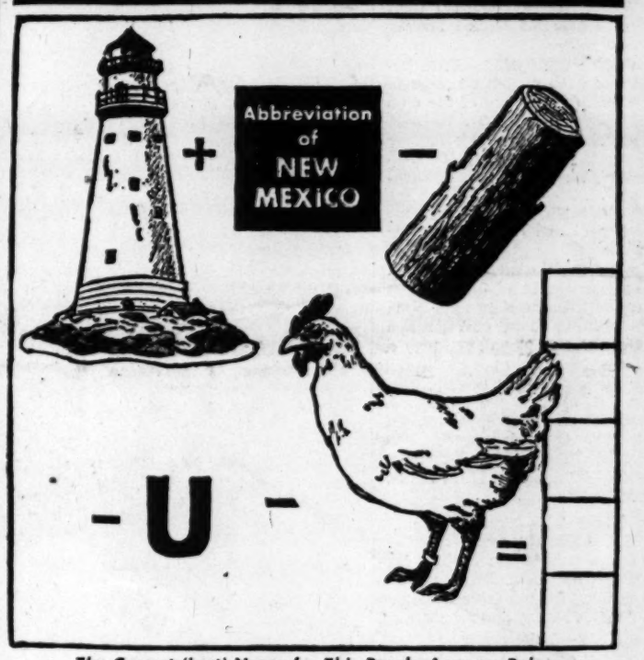
Can YOU Solve This Clever Little Puzzle?

It's a sample of the kind of puzzles you'll enjoy solving in this new $75,000.00 Contest. See "how to solve it" explanation below.



The Correct (Last) Name for This Puzzle Appears Below:

John Paul JONES — Jesse JAMES — John ADAMS
Alfred E. SMITH — Patrick HENRY — Ulysses S. GRANT

This is a lesson in how to solve a set of puzzles that can lead you to a cash reward of as much as $50,000.00. Please read carefully the explanation which follows:

Each puzzle represents a well-known name and in the puzzles there are shown various objects, letters and abbreviations, with plus and minus signs indicating whether to add or subtract the letters that make these up. Your job is to recognize the objects and clues, and according to the plus and minus signs work out the correct name for each puzzle.

But let's work out the sample puzzle above to see just how it works:

There we see a LIGHTHOUSE, to which we add N M (abbreviation of New Mexico) as directed by the plus sign. We thus now have L I G H T H O U S E N M. We are next told (by the minus sign) to subtract what is obviously a LOG, so we cross out the letters L O G, leaving the letters I H T H U S E N M. Then we are told to take away the letter U and what is evidently a HEN. Thus, crossing out U and H E N, we are finally left with the letters I T H S M. So we fit those letters into the squares to the right of the equal sign, and since they fit exactly (five letters, five squares) it appears that we are right thus far.

But there still remains one thing to do. We must unscramble and re-arrange those letters so as to form a well-known name. What name can it be? Can it be THIMS? No! Can it be MITHS? No! Can it be SMITH? Why, of course! And to verify our answer, sure enough there's the name Alfred E. SMITH in the list under the puzzle.

Get the idea? Then by all means mail coupon below for 33 official puzzles and full details. They'll be sent you entirely FREE of obligation.

Order Due Shortly Easing Status Rules For War Employes

Unless there is another abrupt switch in plans, an order to make it easier for about 5000 war service employes to get regular Civil Service status will be issued shortly.

A proposed directive has been drawn up. It's reported to have been cleared by the Civil Service Commission, Justice Department and the Budget Bureau. It awaits merely the President's signature to make it effective. These are among the provisions as it's now written:

Any war service appointee who who has been in a classified job since on or before March 15, 1942, would be eligible for status;

Each eligible employe would have to be recommended to the Civil Service Commission for status by his agency in order to get it;

The commission would give each employe so recommended a noncompetitive test, and a passing mark on it would be required before status could be granted;

Veterans who left war-service jobs to join the armed forces—provided they were appointed to them before March 15, 1942, and returned after their discharges—would be eligible for status, and finally, a war-service employe who was laid off in a reduction of force and was out of the Government less than a year between March 15, 1942, and the date of the proposed order would be eligible for status.

The directive is intended to help Civil Service speed up its big examining program and to confer status on a relatively small number of people who have been in Government up to 10 and 15 years and still have temporary status through quirks in rules and regulations.

It had been planned to issue the order last spring at a time when upwards of 20,000 employes would have been covered into status jobs. The directive, however, was laid aside when employe and veteran groups objected to it.

Since that time, the Civil Service examining program and layoffs have reduced sharply the number of employes who would be affected by such an order. Many of the estimated 5000 are holding specialized and technical jobs for which few people could qualify and the cost of holding open competitive Civil Service tests for them is regarded as excessive and unnecessary.

STORY: Civil Service officials thought they had heard everything about their examinations, but the following letter from a young lady is something new—and amusing:

"Dear Sir:

"Will you kindly put my name in your inactive file for at least one year.

"I have been married for six years and in this period of time I had no family. Thinking that I could not have a family, I took a Civil Service test; however, to my pleasant surprise, I am now with child."

A Civil Service official who read the letter chuckled: "Now they can't say that Civil Service exams aren't productive."

DEFENSE CUTBACK: Defense Secretary Johnson is having an inventory made of all real estate owned and used by the Army, Navy and Air Force. His reported objectives are to:

1. Sell pieces of property that are rarely and little used by the armed services. Consolidate field offices of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

A preliminary check is said to show that the agencies are holding property for years—real estate that wasn't even used during World War II. Sales of property not only would put dollars in the Treasury but it would put the property back on State and local tax rolls.

JOBS: If you're after a clerical job, remember our tip here Saturday that Veterans Administration today will start to hire 400 tabulating machine operators (men only). No status or experience is needed for the temporary jobs. Apply in Room 2057 of the Munitions Building on Constitution ave.

INQUIRY: The congressional inquiry into the Civil Service test for hearing examiners is scheduled to begin today before a three-man subcommittee headed by Chairman Johnston of the Senate Civil Service Committee. The sessions should produce some fireworks.

Minister Denies War In Future Inevitable

The Rev. C. S. Lowell Says All Must Work For Things Leading To Peace in World

A Washington Methodist minister yesterday scored the "dismaying tendency among the peoples of the world to take the threat of World War III lying down."

Speaking at Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn sts. nw., the Rev. C. Stanley Lowell declared that "our Christian faith, if not our humanity, tells us to get up and go out to meet this dire challenge."

Mr. Lowell pointed out that the New Testament suggests "aggressive, militant, dynamic" attitude toward evil in all its forms.

"We must work affirmatively and creatively at the things that make for peace," he said. "We can in our personal thinking refuse to accept the inevitability of war," Rev. Lowell declared.

At National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw., the Rev. Dr. Edward L. R. Elson declared that efforts in various parts of the world to achieve some of the elements of the Kingdom of God without recognition of God's sovereignty in life are "fatal and utterly impossible."

The Kingdom, he said, cannot be established on an immoral foundation, nor can it be established on a secular foundation which lacks the motivation of service to mankind as an expression of the love of God.

Only when God is acknowledged as sovereign ruler of all life, and when men are obedient to Him, can the Kingdom come on earth, Dr. Elson said.

In his morning radio program over WTOP, Elder Solomon Lightfoot Michaux, pastor of the Church of God, 2030 Georgia ave. nw., urged passage of the President's civil rights program. By enactment of the law, he said, America would take from Russia the "biggest club" by which Russia hopes to crush American influence among the darker races of the world.

The Communists, the elder said, are seeking to overthrow the American Government by using the propaganda of segregation and telling the Negro that he is being treated as an inferior citizen "thereby making such converts as Paul Robeson and thousands of other secret followers among the Negro race."

Church Week Proclamation Is Due Today

The Commissioners today plan to proclaim their suport of the nineteenth annual observance of Religious Education Week, September 25 through October 2.

In a formal proclamation the Commissioners will say:

"We urge our fellow citizens to support each his own church or synagogue and the educational enterprises associated with it, to work together in whatever ways they can for the training of better citizens, to lead our city to a new understanding of spiritual values and their important role in our democracy, and to continue the free religious heritage that has helped to make America foremost among the nations of the world."

The proclamation declares that "the future welfare of our city depends to an important extent on the community experiences which our children and young people receive today."

It urges that all citizens give active support and cooperation to the public and private agencies that work for the development of character and citizenship.

Man, 47, Stabbed Fatally; Woman Under Arrest

Tasco Holmes, 47, died yesterday at Gallinger Hospital of stab wounds in the chest which police said he suffered a short time earlier in his home at 490 Casey ct. nw.

Florence Elizabeth Holmes, 43, who, they said, was his common law wife, was arrested and charged with homicide.

Police quoted her as saying Holmes had been drinking heavily, and menaced her with a knife. She picked up a paring knife, the officers quoted her as saying, and stabbed him in self-defense.

Garden Club to Hear Expert Talk on Lilies

Dr. Niels Stuart, an Agriculture Department horticulturist, will speak on "Culture and Propagation of Lilies," at the first meeting of the fall season of the Silver Spring Garden Club at 8 p. m. today at the Jesup Blair Community House, Georgia ave. at the District line.

This year the club plans to sponsor a memory garden as a living memorial to the Silver Spring men who were killed in World War II.

Police Warned On Safety for School Days

District and nearby Maryland policemen yesterday were alerted to afford protection from traffic hazards to the approximately 135,000 children starting school today.

Every available officer on duty will be charged with the task of seeing the children safely across intersections designated as school crossings, and other congested traffic points.

In a special order covering District policemen, Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, directed that personnel be released from precinct and other station duty where possible, that corporals, half of scout car crews, and even half of radio patrol wagon crews guard the school- and home-bound children.

In addition, Barrett ordered that every police officer, at all times, whether on duty or not, assist children at congested traffic points when he sees necessity for it.

Schoolboy patrols also will be on hand to aid children crossing intersections.

Local precinct commanders were directed to keep in contact with principals and teachers at individual schools in their areas to effect "greatest and best safety practices."

In Montgomery and Prince Georges County, county and State patrolmen will be stationed at hazardous crossings.

On Recreation

Officials To Attend Conference

Six representatives of the District Recreation Board and Department will attend the thirty-first National Recreation Congress in New Orleans this week.

Wender

The congress will be held from September 12 to 16, and is for the purpose of exchanging information, experience and ideas.

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the recreation board, who heads the delegation, will discuss the place of citizen boards in park and recreation program at a meeting Tuesday. Milo F. Christiansen, recreation superintendent, will discuss college training for recreation workers at a Wednesday program.

Other members of the delegation are Walter Fowler, representing the District Commissioners, Miss Sibyl Baker and John L. Young, assistant recreation superintendents, and Mrs. Clarice O. Smith, program organizer in the neighborhood centers division of the department.

Yacht Blast Burns Three District Men

R. W. Harris, Owner, Two Others Swim Ashore Badly Hurt In Solomons Fire

The victims are R. W. Harris, a real estate man of 214 S st. nw., owner of the 40-foot yacht Miss Jean, Frank Studwood of 807 Otis pl. nw. and Henry Ellis of 1751 S st. nw.

At Calvert County Hospital in Prince Frederick, doctors said Harris suffered third degree burns on his hands and ankles and first degree burns on his face; Ellis had first degree burns on both hands and lower thighs and Studwood suffered third degree burns on his hands and lower thighs and second degree burns on his face.

All were reported to be in good condition.

Cedric Heath, secretary of the Solomons Yacht Club, a few yards away, said the Miss Jean blew up when taking on gasoline. The three victims dived into the water and swam ashore. Two others aboard, Steve Davis and Frank Davis, also of Washington were unhurt. Cause of the explosion was not immediately determined.

Area Man, 73, Is Killed by Moving Train

A man identified as Nick Perakes, 73, an unemployed stonecutter, of 5209 Tilden rd., Decatur Heights, Md., was killed yesterday morning when struck by a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad train.

The accident occurred as he walked along the B. & O. tracks, South Dakota ave ne. Police said the body was carried more than a mile before the engineer, Reginald M. Bowman, 63, Baltimore, Md., could stop the passenger train.

Police said the dead man was on his way to visit a cousin, Henry Cotsonis, 6208 Kilmer st., Cheverly, Md., when he was struck. Bowman told officers he did not see Perakes until the train was "right on top of him."

Other persons living in Perake's home told police the victim was hard of hearing and probably was not aware the train was approaching. Dr. A. Magruder McDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

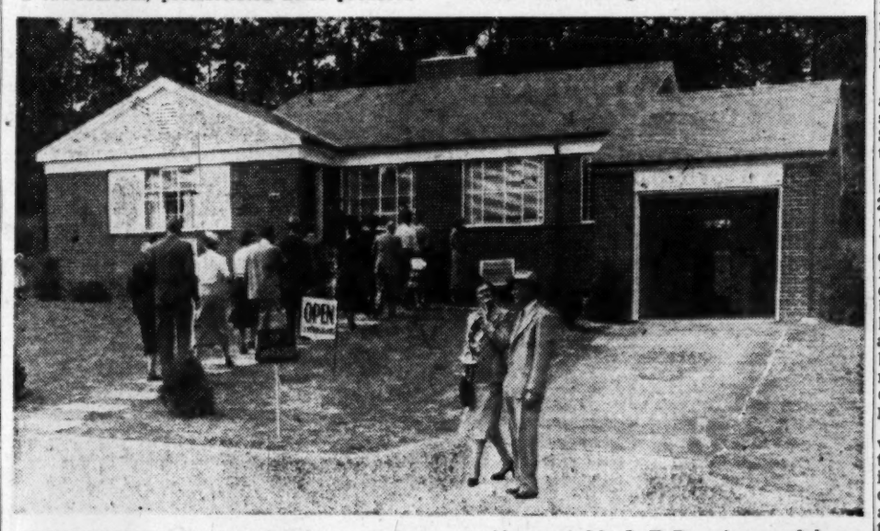
Thousands Visit 'Homes of '49,' Make Notes on Prefabs, Ramblers

OVER 10,000 prospective home owners yesterday provided Kensington, Md., with its worst traffic jam in years as they turned out to view a two-bedroom, prefabricated home produced by Gunnison. The dwelling was one of 22 model houses opened to the public yesterday in The Washington Post sponsored "Homes of '49." The waiting line extended a block



HIGHER-PRICED housing also drew crowds. This waiting line is at the $23,500 Chevy Chase rambler erected by L. E. Breuninger and decorated by the P. J. Nee Co.

10,000 Are Counted At Kensington; Sales Staffs Impressed by Buying Power

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

Perfect weather and 22 dream houses proved an irresistible magnet yesterday.

Thousands of home-conscious Washingtonians flocked to the "Homes of '49" in various sections of the metropolitan area. Opening originally was scheduled at 12:30 yesterday, but crowds at most of the homes were so large by 10 a. m. that doors were opened then.

Over 10,000 persons were counted at the "Homes of '49" erected in Kensington, Md., by Walker Homes, Inc., local distributors for Gunnison Homes, Inc., veteran prefab firm.

"It's utterly fantastic," was the comment of Samuel Walker, company president, as he viewed the long line of people waiting to go through the four-room, two-bedroom home which sells for under $8000.

"We've been swamped since 9 a. m.," Walker added. "I've never seen such crowds in all my life." Spotlights were turned on at dark to accommodate late home seekers.

The housing exhibition is sponsored by The Washington Post, 22 home builders and 8 furniture stores. The first annual "Homes of '48" was hailed as an outstanding success by participating firms, but crowds at yesterday's opening were approximately double those of last year. Eight homes have been furnished and decorated especially for the event by leading furniture dealers. Furnishings were planned with the comfort and pocketbook of the prospective buyer in mind.

Houses in the vast extravaganza varied from the Gunnison prefab to a $60,000 three-level rambler in Malbrook, Va. The latter home drew two gasps from viewers: one as they saw it silhouetted against the sky; the second as they viewed the furnishings by Malcolm Scates, Inc.

Buying Power in Evidence

While sales staffs at all homes were kept busy answering questions and pointing out features to potential purchasers, a scene at the office of Merrimac he Development Co. gave proof of the buying power attracted by the exhibition:

A line of prospects were waiting patiently to sign papers to buy the attractive ramblers, priced at $13,100 and located in New Hampshires Estates, Md. More than 30 have been sold.

All "Homes of '49" will open today, and other weekdays, at 2 p. m. and close at dark. Saturday and Sunday visiting hours are from 10 a. m. until dark. There is no admission charge at any home. Maps showing exact locations of all homes are carried each Sunday in the real estate section of The Washington Post. Similar maps are available at the homes or at the front counter of The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw.

Interest at Fever Pitch

Purpose of the event is to show prospective home and furniture buyers just what is available in Washington today. Anyone taking the complete tour will be exposed to about every kind of home, architectural style, price and furnishings.

The large attendance yesterday proved what realtors and builders have been shouting for the last month — that interest in new homes is at fever pitch and that people have an insatiable curiosity about new trends in architecture, construction and home furnishings.

Roads were jammed near every home. Cars were bumper-to-bumper on Georgia ave. from Colesville rd. to Carroll Knolls, where two exhibit homes are located. Scores of people were observed viewing the various homes from chartered cabs.

Notebooks and pencils were in evidence everywhere as both men and women noted interesting architectural treatments, or furnishings and decoration tricks which could be imitated in their own homes.

A typical architectural eye-opener was the beautiful floor-to-ceiling which separates the living room and dinette in the $23,500

Destroyer in Mock Attack on Fort McHenry On Eve of the Observance of Defenders Day

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Maryland, observing Defenders Day today, will commemorate a brave old story—the defense of Baltimore and the writing of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

In sharp contrast to the military equipment of 135 years ago, four F-86 Sabre jet fighters flew across Fort McHenry in Baltimore late yesterday in an aerial salute, and a Navy destroyer and two destroyer escorts made a mock attack on the fort in the evening. There was also a fireworks display.

Today, a legal holiday in Maryland, a program celebrating the writing of the national anthem will be held from 6 to 10 p. m.

Baltimore's story actually was Washington's and Alexandria's story first.

On August 15, 1814, the British—led by Admiral Cockburn, Admiral Sir Alexander Cochrane and General Robert Ross, the latter of whom had fought with Wellington in Spain—dropped anchor at the mouth of the Potomac River.

Only 5 Miles Away

On August 18 the British were at the mouth of the Patuxent River and the following day sailed some 20 miles upstream and disembarked. The redcoats, 4500 strong, marched to Upper Marlboro, 20 miles from the Capital, and from there to Bladensburg, 5 miles from Washington.

Bladensburg had been selected as the rendezvous of the American units, mostly raw militia, and it was there the British met their first opposition.

The 6000 or more green American troops, led by leaders who were confused and inefficient, broke before the experienced British regulars in the August 24 battle and retreated in panic.

The British attack had been launched in such a way that the Americans fled in two groups, and as a Georgetown newspaper indignantly said at the time, "the inhabitants of Washington and Georgetown had the mortification to see the whole body pass through their streets in disgraceful flight."

Public Buildings Burned

Washington was abandoned by the Government. The District Militia, the Virginia Militia and the other military units retreated through Georgetown. The Capitol, the White House and other public buildings were burned by the British raiders.

It was Alexandria's turn next.

A British squadron commanded by Commodore Gordon anchored off the town on August 24. With Washington's fate in mind, the Alexandrians took one look at the British guns and paid ransom.

Baltimore was next on the British agenda.

On September 11, 135 years ago today and also a Sunday, lookouts on the city's housetops, their glasses turned east, saw the British fleet, 50 sails in all, arrive in the mouth of the Patapsco.

On a finger of land, the British put ashore soldiers, sailors and marines at 2 a. m. the morning of September 12. When they were halfway along their 15-mile march to the city they halted to rest.

An American advance guard suddenly roused them. General Ross was mortally wounded by two American youths hidden in a hollow.

The British, however, moved forward and a general engagement followed with American troops fighting a delaying action.

The British plan called for simultaneous action by sea and by land, so five bomb ships moved to within 2 miles of Fort McHenry and opened fire at dawn on Tuesday, September 13. The Americans in the fort found their shots falling short and took refuge in the entrenchments.

The bombardment continued into the night, and the frustrated British as a next measure attempted to put ashore a landing force equipped with scaling ladders to take the fort from behind.

The assault force sent up rockets in an effort to find a landing place. The rockets, however, gave away their position and the American line opened up, driving the boats back.

The naval bombardment of Fort McHenry was resumed with vigor and kept up until after dawn of the 14th.

It lasted a total of 25 hours, with about 400 of the 1500 or more shells expended finding their mark in the fort. The Americans, however, lost only 4 killed and 24 wounded.

Stalled, British Gave Up

Meanwhile, the land expedition found it could not break through the defenses opposing it, and so, stalemated on land and water, the British gave up, withdrawing, in an afternoon rain.

When marching on Washington, the redcoats had seized a Dr. Beanes, a prominent physician of Upper Marlboro. When appeals for his release were ignored, a Georgetown resident of winning personality, Francis Scott Key, was sent to seek his release.

Key caught up with the British fleet as the attack on Baltimore was about to begin. The British refused to release either until the attack was over.

Key watched the flag fly over Fort McHenry all day long, but at night he could only see it by the "rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air."

When "by the dawn's early light" on September 14 he could still see the flag "oer the ramparts we watched," he knew the fort still held firm, and the answer to the question,

"Oh, say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?"

Rutledge Rites Set Here on Wednesday

The body of Supreme Court Justice Wiley Blount Rutledge will be returned to Washington Wednesday for funeral services. His colleagues on the court, from official Washington, and the Nation will pay him honor.

Funeral services for the justice, who died Saturday night at York, Me., will take place at 3 p. m. Wednesday at All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., where he worshiped. The Rev. A. Powell Davies, the pastor, will officiate.

Associates on the Supreme Court will be honorary pallbearers and Supreme Court police under direction of Marshal Thomas E. Waggaman will carry the casket.

Stricken on Vacation

Justice Rutledge was stricken on August 27 while vacationing with his wife at Ogunquit, Me. From then until Saturday, he fought for his life against a cardiac condition. He was 55.

Escorted by Marshal Waggaman, the body left York yesterday, and Boston last night. It will be taken to the Gawler chapel, 1750 Pennsylvania ave. nw., to remain until the funeral. Cremation and burial at Cedar Hill Cemetery will follow.

As the funeral preparations went forward, fellow justices and high officials paid tribute to the second liberal member of the Supreme Court to die in less than two months. The other was Justice Frank Murphy.

Jackson Pays Tribute

Justice Robert H. Jackson said that Justice Rutledge died because he "overtaxed his strength constantly through devotion to his work."

He was a most conscientious and sincere public servant," Justice Jackson said, "who gave himself wholly to his work."

Other tributes were:

Chief Justice Vinson: "Mr Justice Rutlege's death is a severe loss to the country and to me personally Intimate association with him on the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court caused me to know his great work as a jurist and a man. He was an earnest, conscientious, and eminently able jurist. He was true to his ideals, and, in all, a great American."

Attorney General Howard McGrath: "I am deeply shocked and grieved at the untimely passing of my friend. As a teacher, lawyer, and jurist, he has made a distinguished record in public service. An untiring worker, an everzealous guardian of the rights of the individual, he has won the respect and reverence of all justice-loving people."

Justice Hugo L. Black: "Mr. Justice Rutledge was not only a great judge, but a good and great man. The court has suffered two great losses in his death and the death of Mr. Justice Murphy."

Gillette Speaks for Iowa

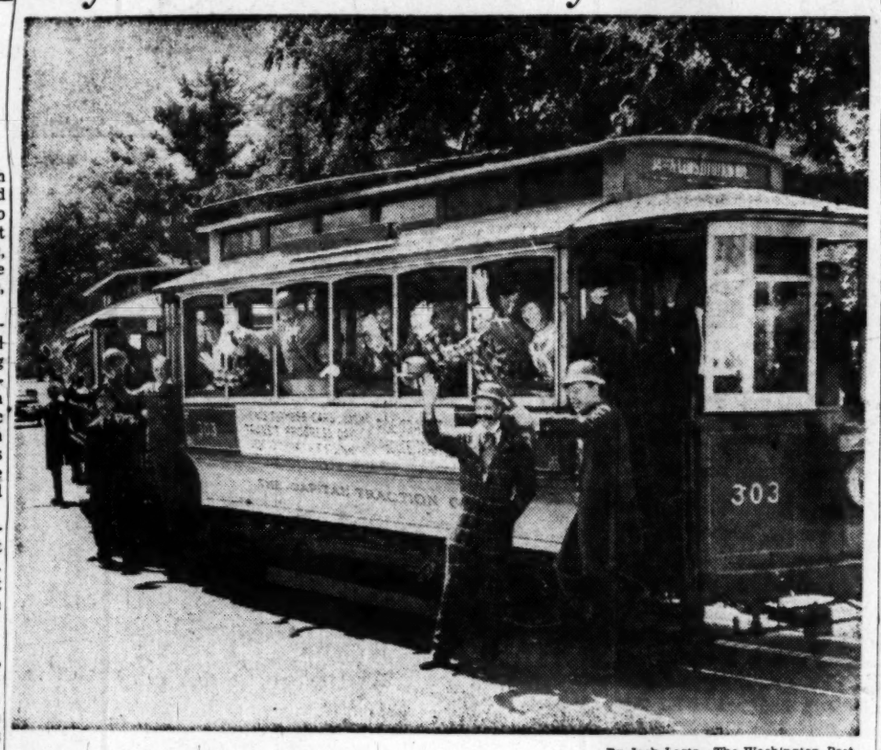
Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa): the State from which Justice Rutledge was appointed): "Iowa feels particularly keenly the death of Justice Rutledge because he was the only member of the Supreme Court the State has ever had. And he was one who served with outstanding distinction."

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.): "He was an excellent justice and he had nothing but my highest commendation. It is my deep regret to hear that he died. He was a liberal and a splendid lawyer."

Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.): "He was a man of personal attractiveness and execellent ability, industry and thorough integrity. His temperament was thoroughly judicial and his attitude toward great legal questions was one of soundness, fairness, and impartiality. His contribution to our judicial system is great."

Philip Murray, president of the CIO: "He was a distinguished American and rendered great and constructive service to his Nation and to humanity."

'Gay Nineties' Ride on Memory Lane



By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

TO KICK OFF Transit Progress Day today, the Capital Transit Co. and a group of transportation fans known as the Tractioneers took this 40-year-old antique for a four-hour spin around the District yesterday

'Gay Nineties' Trolley Tours Washington for Four Hours

In an atmosphere of bowlers, bustles and handlebar mustaches, an antique hand-brake streetcar toured Washington trolley lines yesterday for the first time in 35 years.

The Gay Nineties expedition was sponsored by the Capital Transit Co. and a group of transportation fans known as the "Tractioneers," both with a common interest in Transit Progress Day today.

Pedestrians stared in disbelief as the old trolley left the Peace Monument shortly after 1 p. m. and bounced down Pennsylvania ave., carrying 15 company representatives and 30 tractioneers dressed in loud plaid suits, taffeta hoop skirts, all cheering enthusiastically. They alone knew that the trolley would complete its four-hour tour to Lincoln Park, Brookland and the Navy Yard.

Antique Newly Painted

At the controls of the newly painted antique was J. T. Souder, a Capital Transit employe who actually operated a similar machine for several years after he joined the company in 1911.

"It runs good," Souder said, as the Tractioneers echoed approval, "but this hand brake is tricky and takes a good deal of muscle in the course of a working day." Souder said he preferred the "side door 500's," which replaced the hand brake models in 1915.

Passengers sat facing each other on velvet cushions, laughing at 30-year-old chewing gum advertisements, unmindful of the jolts so different from the spring-filled rides of today.

Chairman Wears Police Garb

Tractioneer excursion chairman was Capt. G. F. Cunningham, of the Air Force, a transportation fan from Haverhill, Mass. Dressed in the police costume of the era, Cunningham supervised two other transit fans, both company operators, drafted as conductors yesterday, Michael J. Lavelle and William Miller.

Today's celebration of Transit Progress Day centers in a lunch at the Willard Hotel honoring the five oldest regular trolley riders whom the Capital Transit Co. could find.

They are Allen Colton, 93, 815 Flower ave., Takoma Park, Md., a retired Agriculture Department employe and a regular rider; William H. Ernest, 6925 Georgia ave. nw., 89; C. O. Bohrer, 405 Rock Creek Church rd. nw., 89; Samuel S. Blackman, 1908 35th st. nw., 89; Mrs. Charlotta Marceron, 54 Rhode Island ave. ne., 82, and Mrs. Wilhelmina Grohmann, 527 3d st. ne., 82.

'Homes of '49' Draw Crowds

rambler built by L. E. Breuninger and furnished by the P. J. Nee Co. in Edgevale Terr., off East-West hghwy.

A dining room with walls covered in a floral Chintz fabric, instead of conventional wall paper, drew raves from crows at the W. C. and A. N. Miller home in Spring Valley, decorated by Woodward & Lothrop.

A beautiful cabinet-storage wall, mounted on casters for movability, attracted attention at the Twinbrook home, near Rockville, Md., on Viers Mill rd. Bunk beds with a ladder to the top bed attracted the small fry, who slipped away from parents and made their way up the ladder.

Furniture Makes a Hit

Reproductions of famous furniture masterpieces made a hit with visitors to the home erected by Cooley Bros. at the new Springfield subdivision, off River rd., near Kenwood Country Club. Typical was a solid mahogany corner cupboard in the dining room. It was a hand-made, exact copy of a similar Chippendale piece produced around 1750.

Wallpaper, of a beautiful peacock on a floral pattern, covered the dining-room walls and was an exact copy of paper used in the Governor's Mansion in Massachusetts in 1795.

The long-awaited housing event got under way officially yesterday following a radio salute at 12:30 over Radio Station WTOP. Participating were William S. Banks, president, Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington; Frederick P. H. Siddons, president, Washington Board of Trade; James Russell Wiggins, managing editor, and Lucia Brown, home furnishings editor, The Washington Post.

Siddons expressed the Board of Trade's appreciation to The Washington Post, builders and furniture dealers participating in the event for the fine job accomplished.

He pointed out that builders and architects, in addition to stressing utility and convenience, must also place emphasis on beauty and general excellence of new homes so the Nation's Capital will merit praise from visitors to next year's Sesquicentennial.

The event officially closes at dark on Sunday, October 2.

GOP to Meet in Bethesda

The Young Republican Club of Montgomery County will hold its first fall meeting at 8:30 p. m. today in the Bethesda county building. A suggestions committee will be appointed by Hugh Hassell, president.

Mrs. Beer, Former Golf Titlist, Dies

Word has been received here of the death in California of Mrs. Estelle Davy Beer, known in local golf circles for her championship play, and former wife of Myron Davy, prominent Washington builder.

Mrs. Beer

She died at her home in Santa Babrara August 27, apparently from an overdose of sleeping pills. The coroner listed the death as accidental.

Mrs. Beer was the wife of Harold D. Beer, a former golf professional, whom she divorced and remarried. She was also twice married to Dr. Davy.

Mrs. Davy burned up the local links while living in Washington. In 1941, she took the Middle Atlantic Women's Championship, was runner-up in the Maryland State tournament and also captured the Payne Cup, the major medal play tournament in this section.

Other championships she won included the Mexican women's title and the Congressional Club cup.

Mrs. Bowman buys a bargain

BUDGET-WISE Mrs. Bowman carefully reads the advertisements in her newspaper. Comes across a good buy at her favorite department store. Considers her plans for a busy day — no time for a trip down town. Decides to telephone instead.

At this point, Mrs. Bowman recalls how quickly she'd done her grocery shopping by telephone the day before. How much time she'd saved by calling the meat market, the beauty shop, the laundry and the plumber. Not to mention the Clarks, the Kings and several other friends. She thinks of the feeling of security her telephone provides. Remembers how many good times have begun with the ring of the telephone bell.

Mrs. Bowman decides her telephone service is one of the best bargains she buys.

In Memoriam

A booklet of 101 "In Memoriam" tributes suitable for publication is now available without charge. Remembrances for all members of the family and for friends are included. The booklet may be obtained at the front counter in the Post building, by telephoning your request, or by writing to the Washington Post Classified Advertising Department, Washington 4, D. C.

'Homes of '49' Exhibit, Opened Yesterday, Holds Treat for You

THE welcome mat—a brand new one—is out at the "Homes of '49!"

This fall housing exhibit, with its 22 model homes, opened yesterday at noon. You're cordially invited by The Washington Post, which sponsors the exhibit, to visit it any day this week—or anytime through October 2, for that matter.

We believe it will be a real treat for you and a source of constructive ideas that you can use in your own home. Eight of the houses are completely furnished by eight leading Washington furniture stores. Their decorators have spent much time and effort on making them as attractive as possible.

The houses are scattered around in various sections of the Greater Washington area. Maybe there's one right in your neighborhood that you can walk over to some sunny afternoon. Or get out the car and invite a few of your neighbors to go along for an afternoon of visiting. Maps showing how to find the houses are available in the lobby of The Post, 1337 E st. nw. On Saturdays and Sundays, they open at 10 a. m. and remain open till dark.

Furnished homes are located in Silver Spring (Carroll Knolls), American University Park, Bethesda (Greenwich Forest), Kenwood, Spring Valley, Arlington (Country Club View), Fairfax County (Malbrook), and on East-West hwy. There are unfurnished homes in Cheverly, Bellemead, Oakview, Woodside Forest, Silver Spring, Alta Vista, Wheaton, Rockville, Forest Glen, Oakview, Falls Church, Hillcrest Heights, Michigan Park, and New Hampshire Estates.

Like to Go Back to School?

UNLESS you have a hankering to study batik dying or the keeping of bees, you'll probably find the class to fulfill your heart's desire among those being offered at the YWCA beginning the week of September 26.

Registration for the courses, which include such exciting items as Cordon Bleu cookery, investments for women, and a course in how to fixe balking perculators and dripping faucets, is already under way and will continue until the classes begin.

New classes this year include the Cordon Bleu classes in French and European cooking, conducted by Mme. Irene Beran who ranks with the best. She has, beside her Cordon Blue diploma, certificates from the Gastronomic Academy of Madrid, and from German, Italian and Viennese cooking schools. Classes will be held Monday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 9:15 p. m. and Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday or Friday mornings from 10:15 a. m. to 12:30. Mme. Beran does the cooking: The class does the tasting. Fee, 10 lessons for $30.

Investments for Women, for which registration starts today, is a new class which is expected to draw a large enrollment. Since there is scarcely a man alive can contain his alarm when he realizes that a large proportion of the Nation's wealth is in the hands of women, you might even talk your husband into taking the course, too, just so he can see what women are learning about investments. (This, like most of the YWCA courses, is open to both men and women.)

James B. Pirtle, securities analyst for Auchincloss, Parker and Redpath, investment councilors, will teach this Monday evening course.

Portrait painting and sketching from life are new courses added to the arts and crafts curriculum. M. Bruno Beran, who has recently painted the wives of several Ambassadors, is the instructor.

If your problem is fitting in the dusting and bedmaking between the marketing and entertaining, you might enjoy the new Homemakers Forum which will be conducted at a time and day still to be announced. Practical expenditure of time and money will be taught along with how to cope with such household disasters as marred furniture, spots, stains and falling plaster.

There will also be a new course in slip covers, draperies and lampshades. Students work on muslin in class, make real drapes and slip covers at home. Professional Decorator Otto B. Tingen conducts the course.

A third course of interest to newly-weds is the Modern Marriage Forum. For women only, this discussion group on family relations is conducted by Mrs. Florence Watson Olsen.

The personality side of milady is not overlooked in the courses offered. There is a Personal Improvement Workshop in which the students (women only) get individual assistance in hair styling, make-up and posture. They learn to buy clothes economically and with an eye to flattery, and to meet social situations gracefully.

There are also classes in bridge, ceramics, jewelry making, commercial art, shorthand, typing, vocabulary, diction, story writing—including one on writing for profit conducted by author Majorie Holmes—and radio and contest writing, languages, including Russian, simple cookery, dress design, dressmaking, flower arrangement and interior decoration. There are clases in music and art appreciation, sight reading at the piano, water color and oil painting, photography, story telling and public speaking.

You can learn to be a receptionist or a personnel manager. You can study psychology, mental hygiene and history of the arts and sciences.

Furthermore, if you don't see what you want, ask for it. It may be tucked away somewhere on the curriculum, or may be added next term. For complete information on courses and registrations, call ME. 2100, ext. 29. Don't be shy about the costs: Most of the courses cost $10 or less. And, oh yes—no exams!

Classes in Beauty

THIS is the week to pick up tickets at Woodward & Lothrop for the famous two-hour classes in beauty treatments and make-up conducted by the Elizabeth Arden salon. The classes will be given twice a day—at 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.—at Woody's starting September 19. They are entirely free, even the creams, lotions and makeup being provided, but you must have a ticket to attend. Tickets are being dispensed near the escalator on the first floor.

MR. AND MRS. WASHINGTON went visiting yesterday and took the family with them! They went to see "Homes of '49," the 22 model houses in the exhibit sponsored by The Washington Post. Here, high on a hillside in Fairfax County, they are coming and going from a beautiful three-level rambler of cream-painted brick and redwood siding. Built by Malice and Brooks, the house is decorated in the modern manner by Malcolm Scates, Inc.

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

WHITE shadow boxes, framing small windows on each side of the living room fireplace, are admired by Miss Lorraine Groff of 5704 Oxon Hill rd. se., as she visits the "Home of '49" in American University Park. Walls in this room are forest green, the fireplace white-painted wood and black marble. Karl W. Corby Co. is the builder and William E. Miller Co. furnished the house.

Thrift Shop Opens 21st Year Of Turning Trash to Treasure

THE TWO floors of Washington's Thrift Shop have been crammed with articles ranging from shoes and ships (models, that is)—to sealing wax for opening day.

The Thrift Shop, which opens its doors again today for its twenty-first season of turning one man's white elephant into another man's treasure, is raising funds for six organizations devoted to sheltering and providing medical care for children.

Last year, from the oddities and practical items contributed to the shop at 809 9th st. nw., $23,000 was earned and spent to benefit over 100,000 children.

Washington's Thrift Shop is one of the oldest and most successful of such ventures in the United States. The idea of turning "trash into cash" has worked well, since many an item which a Congressman may regard as clutter in his attic, or which a department store may regard as a space-consuming remnant on its racks, may be just what you or your neighbor want.

The term, "permanent rummage sale" has become somewhat outmoded, the volunteers running the shop have discovered, since the bric-a-brac, clothing, house furnishings and china contributed are often quite choice items.

A letter from Thomas Jefferson and a gold-trimmed Easter egg which was once owned by a Russian Empress have been found in this Thrift Shop. Collectors' pieces of rare old English silver have also turned up. In the New York Thrift Shop, an autograph of Prince Albert was discovered inscribed on a steel engraving of his portrait made in London in 1840.

But in addition to offering fertile ground for the antique hunters, the shop offers bargains to the budget minded. By buying at the shop, penny-wise buyers can get a bargain and contribute to the purchase of cribs, nightgowns and toys for orphaned or sick children with the same dollar. Except for a paid manager and two assistants, the work of the shop is done by volunteers, headed by Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, so that the maximum amount of money will go to the children's charities.

Six organizations direct and are benefited by the shop: Children's Hospital, the Child Welfare Society, Columbia Hospital's Prenatal Clinic, the Children's Country Home, St. John's Orphanage and the Junior League's children's projects.

If you wish to contribute articles to the shop, call ME. 1026 and ask them to have a truck call at your home. Or take the articles to the shop yourself, and who knows? Maybe you'll see something there that you want to buy for your home.

About Painting Pine Paneling

We are thinking of purchasing a home which has pine paneling throughout four rooms—living, dining, den and master bedroom. The paneling is stained a dark reddish maple which I know will not set off my mahogany furniture. Is it possible to paint white or other light color over the stain without the stain coming through? Would this be proper for a colonial interior or would it be better to remove the present stain to make the walls lighter? If so, how can this be done? J. L. S.

If the stain on the walls was applied in the form of varnish stain, it is possible to paint directly over it with no danger of the stain coming through. If there is a high gloss on the finish, before the paint is applied to insure a good bond, the gloss should be first cut by rubbing with sandpaper or steel wool.

If, however, the walls have been stained with a penetrating or oil stain before applying paint, it would be wise to go over the surface with a thin coat of shellac to avoid smearing.

It is true that paneled walls are usually finished with a method which permits the grain of the wood to show. However, in the case of so much paneling in one house it might be more pleasing to finish at least some of the rooms with paint. A grayed green would be lovely and would fit into a colonial interior nicely.

To make the walls lighter without painting, it is necessary to first remove the stain. Varnish stain can be removed by using a paint and varnish remover. This will even remove most of an oil stain which largely lies on the surface. A penetrating stain would have to be removed with a wood bleach. However, to do this on the entire wall surface of a room would develop into an operation of major proportions.

Does frozen orange juice have the same vitamin content as fresh orange juice? After mixing for use, is there a vitamin loss? Can it be kept for any length of time after defrosting without appreciable vitamin loss? How about fresh orange juice in this regard? G. S.

Reconstituted frozen orange juice and canned orange juice are approximately the same in vitamin content, each containing only 3 to 5 per cent less vitamin C than the freshly squeezed juice. Reconstituted frozen or fresh orange juice can be kept after mixing or squeezing in the refrigerator for up to 48 hours without appreciable loss of vitamin C.

Closed Toe Pump Is Shoe of Year

I know that many women are so spoiled by open toe shoes that they think they can't wear anything else. That's nonsense, because closed toe pumps can be comfortable if you pick the right last and the right heel height.

If you want your shoes to keep in fashion step with your clothes, they should be closed toe pumps. But you can have any heel height you want. Lower heels, from flats to medium, are just as smart as 3-inch spikes.

Your pumps can look open and lacy too—via a low shell cut or open cut-outs in the vamp. But never forget it's the closed toe pump that's the smart shoe of the year.

Startling Results Claimed
For New Beauty Lotion and Method

BY MARY HAHLBECK

This is one of those unusually golden moments that sometimes comes in my career as a beauty editor with a watchful conscience and a deep and ever-present belief in the worth-whileness of a woman's following her instincts toward cultivating ALL her inherent beauty and maintaining it—or regaining it—by making intelligent use of reliable scientific means now available.

This time it's a single preparation, with many months' record of public success. Its launching last fall followed a lengthy period of behind-the-scenes tests, the sensational results of which electrified the "grapevine" by which I first heard that this amazing cosmetic was "in the works."

Results Startle

One or two people in the industry whispered to me of startling improvements they had seen among the test cases, the majority of which were well known women, well past the peak of youth. One was a New York actress, who exclaimed jubilantly after a few weeks of using this cosmetic treatment, "Everyone is telling me I look 10 YEARS YOUNGER!"

Another was a successful business woman in her sixties—whose facial and throat contours were literally "picked up," the slack, flabby skin so firmed that she, too, looked much younger and more attractive.

Impressed

Impressed as I was when I weighed all this with my knowledge of the bend-over-backwards conservativeness of the company that was adding this new preparation to its line in which every item was noted for its excellent performances, I decided to wait to see what it could do for women I knew before mentioning it in this column.

Now, I can say with the assurance of my own convictions, built upon these various eye-witness experiences, that it IS possible for this ONE preparation to make such astonishing improvements and corrections in the skin as . . . firming sagging contours of the chin and neck, smoothing out lines, such as those surrounding the mouth, flattening puffs, putting slack muscles back to work, and making the skin look vastly more alive, clearer and fresher.

What is it? A blend of oils and astringents that you use at home—daily—according to the instructions charting the application procedure. No, you don't have to be an expert to give yourself this wonderfully corrective treatment. Simple charts enclosed with each package give easy-to-follow directions for the movements of the treatment. When you've done them once, you'll have no trouble remembering them.

Seal—or muskrat? Often it takes a careful eye to distinguish between the two, but what woman would want them sold to her by the same name?

You should have the same right of choice in buying fabrics as in furs—yet two "look-alike" textile fibers are now sold to you under one name, rayon. Their great differences show up after you buy them—in resistance to soiling, in ease of washing, in the way they iron and hold a press, and in countless other ways important to you as a consumer.

To avoid blind buying, urge your retailer to call these two unlike fibers by different names—to identify one as rayon, and the other as estron, as recommended by the American Society for Testing Materials.

If you would like a free picture book that shows you in photographs of actual tests the differences between these two man-made fibers, just pencil your name and address on this ad and return it to us.

You will find the booklet—"The Tag that Tells the Consumer-WHAT?"—a help in buying fabrics and clothing.

O'Bing, O'Barry And O'Blarney

By Richard L. Coe

HAVING SKIRTED the Emerald Isle on their joint journeys, Bing and Barry finally reach it in their newest picture," Top o' the Morning," at the Palace. Their easy-going charms make it a pleasant, unassuming little picture.

Naturally, for Crosby and Fitzgerald to wind up in Ireland together, something terrific has to happen and it has. The Blarney Stone's been stolen. Should ever the pair meet in the Middle East it would surprise none of their fans to learn that the Suez Canal has slipped beneath the sands.

Which would be as perfectly simple for Bing-Barry fans to accept as the theft of the Blarney Stone. The picture's virtue lies in not overblowing so startling a matter once it's stated. The peasants, of course, are interested, but scarcely shattered and the matter's not even treated to the technicolor processes one might expect for so massive a theme.

Bing plays an American insurance company investigator. Barry's an ageing, bumbling local constable with as pretty a daughter as etc., etc., etc., prettily played by busy Ann Blyth. How the dastardly culprit finally is unmasked and what's become of the stone that brings eloquence is spun along to a final chase sequence unusual in Crosby pictures.

Theoretically, one is inclined to sneer at professional Irishism, which is fed us in all sorts of ways from tinted travel brochures, Morton Downey's night club turn, Fifth Avenue's St. Patrick's Day parade and almost any cop in the movies. The idea that anything Irish is wondrous quaint, fey and lovable has me as weary as most people, but the darn charm works. Flying this summer from Newfoundland to Shannon, 18,000 feet in the clouds, I was embarrassed to find my heart took an extra tumble when, leaving the cotton skies for the first time in hours, we dipped through them and there, greener than green, lay Ireland.

So, you see, it's all well and good to think you're safe from such banal sentimentality. You will find this Ireland of Bing's and Barry's more American than Irish and it's perfectly open about being outrageously Erin-go-bragh.

"TOP O' THE MORNING." Paramount release produced by Robert L. Welch. Screen play by Edmund Beloin and Richard Breen. Photographed by Lionel Lindon. Music arranged by Joseph J. Lilley, with new songs by Johnny Burke and James Van Heusen. Directed by David Miller. At the Palace.

Moonlight Night" and, yes, "Believe Me if All Those Endearing Young Charms." He does have two new tunes, though, by Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen, "You're in Love With Someone" and the title song.

These he sings to Miss Blyth, who, however cloying her orders, is a saucy young thing. And some Bing sings to his own melodeon, which I'd have called an accordian if I hadn't been told.

Hume Cronyn has a grand part which he does with dry humor and the Abbey Theater's Eileen Crowe is on tap as a prophecying old fireside sitter, Biddy O'Devlin.

"Top o' the Morning" would be pretty unbearable without Bing and Barry, though, but no one would hardly have tried making it without them.

MARIE POWERS today packs her luggage at Olney to go back to the restful convent where she lives . . . "The Medium" of last week's bill is a striking personality . . . Her curtain calls recalled those lovely ones of Edward Everett Horton; Marie would stride forward, holding her hands like a man on the mound about to make a pitch . . . She lives for her work, resting all day for the performance and retiring to her room immediately afterwards . . . She's a great roller skater, which method of transportation she gives up only when it's snowing; then she cycles . . . Deeply religious, she neither smokes nor drinks, but insists on a steak a day when she's working . . . Startled after a week of singers and pianists practicing up from nine ayem on, the Olney countryside now goes back to the comparative quiet of actor folk, like Helen Hayes and Kent Smith.

KEITH'S confuses the opening-day addicts again, by tossing out "Yes, Sir, That's My Baby" tonight and opening another football yarn tomorrow, "Easy Living," with Victor Mature, Lucille Ball and Lizabeth Scott as the gals and Victor Mature and Sonny Tufts among the pros.

Didn't Differ With Acheson, Johnson Says

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Secretary of Defense Johnson denied today that he differed with Secretary of State Acheson over sending an American steel mill to Marshal Tito.

"I am not worrying about the present decision on the steel mill going to Tito," he said. "We'll take a look at that a year from now and see how things go between Tito and Stalin."

Johnson's remarks were made in a discussion with three Illinois Democratic Representatives—O'Hara, Sabath and Mack. They were transcribed in his Washington office for broadcast over Radio Station WCFL, Chicago.

O'Hara asked the Defense Secretary to discuss reports about a purported difference of opinion between yourself and the Secretary of State over the advisability of granting financial and industrial support to Marshal Tito." Johnson replied:

"When Dean and I disagree, as we sometimes do, we sit down and out of the talks there comes agreement. The stories in the press that we have had these fights that threaten the integrity of the Administration are utterly without foundation."

Premier Denies Chiang Made Off With $300 Million

Canton, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Premier Yen Hsi-Shan today formally denied a statement by Senator Connally (D., Tex) that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek "absconded" to Formosa with $300,000,000 in Nationalist funds.

The charges are "entirely without foundation," Yen said.

"In point of fact," he said, "all Chinese Government appropriations are the responsibility of the National Treasury and the Finance Ministry and all such appropriations are made strictly according to regulations and laws."

"So far as I know," he added, "President Chiang did not transfer any government funds after his retirement."

Girl Tennis Star Charges Father With Incest

Hollywood, Sept. 11 (AP).—Leslie E. Jahn, 41, was booked at Hollywood Jail today on suspicion of incest after his daughter, Laura Lou Jahn, 16-year-old tennis champion, told police he had forced her to have sexual relations with him.

Police said the girl, holder of the national girls' indoor singles title, accused her father of forcing her into incest since she was 10 years old.

Jahn, a tennis instructor at the fashionable Shadow Mountain Club near Palm Springs, denied her charges. He called them a misguided reprisal for his refusal to let her have dates during tennis tours.

Yemen Accuses British of Attack By Air Strafing

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 11 (AP).—Yemen officially accused Britain today of attacking her independence and dignity with a strafing sortie by 14 Royal Air Force planes September 2. Acting Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibn Abdullah Amri of Yemen said his South Arabian kingdom will protest to the United Nations Security Council unless Britain apologizes and pays reparations.

He accused Britain of violating the U. N. charter by attacking a fellow member of the U. N.

(In London, the British colonial office last Friday said RAF planes "took action" only after Yemenites ignored repeated warnings and built a fort 1 mile west of Naad Mardad and 2 miles inside Britain's Aden protectorate, after a quarrel with a local Aden chieftain.)

Mrs. Roosevelt Criticized Again By Clergyman

Lockport, N. Y., Sept. 11 (AP).—Dr. Walter A. Maier, Lutheran Hour speaker who is engaged in a controversy with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, criticized her again today.

"Critical days have dawned for our country," Dr. Maier told more than 2000 at a Niagara Conference Luther Day rally, "when a former First Lady of the land can attack a preacher of the gospel for proclaiming the fundamental truth of the Bible."

Dr. Maier, of St. Louis, repeated his request that Mrs. Roosevelt "prove—which she cannot—or publicly retract" a statement in her column last week that he is "a somewhat fanatic fundamentalist."

Airliner Just Missed By Model Plane

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—A transatlantic airliner, carrying 43 passengers, almost was rammed by a big, engine-powered model plane today, its pilot reported.

Capt. Gerard Bruens, pilot of a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines Constellation from Amsterdam, said the near-accident occurred over Long Island.

He estimated the model had a wingspread of from 2 to 3 feet.

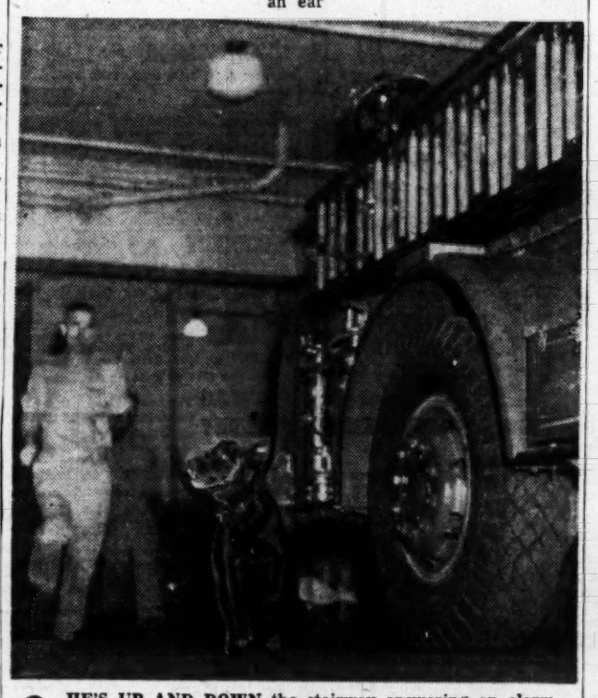
Hawaii Talks to Resume

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Peace talks in the Hawaiian dock strike will resume tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. with employers scheduled to give their views on a series of wage proposals submitted by the union.

Embarking on Seventh Year

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

1. PORKY, MASCOT of Engine 20 and Truck 13, is starting his seventh year of service at the firehouse, Wisconsin ave. and Warren st. nw. Of unknown origin, the dog has spent his days answering alarms in all sorts of weather. Halted by a clickup, Porky waits for the familiar seven, the number that leads off his alarms. Pvt. George Keene (center) also lends an ear



2. HE'S UP AND DOWN the stairway answering an alarm. He uses the stairway and usually hits the ground before the men coming down the pole . . . But the men say it's because he doesn't have to put on running boots

Business Show Continues at Turner's Arena

A three-day exposition designed to acquaint the public with the business services furnished by members of the Affiliated Business Associations of Washington opened yesterday at Turner's Arena.

The exposition, which includes exhibits, demonstrations and entertainment, was preceded yesterday by a parade to the arena through the northwest section of the city.

Theme for the first annual exposition of the association is "Meet Your Business Neighbor . . . He's Pledged to Serve You—Better."

The exposition will be open today and Tuesday from noon until midnight. Highlights each night include an amateur television program with audience participation, a radio broadcast and a ballet performance.

Rev. O'Boyle Approves Addition To Parish School

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, has authorized Blessed Sacrament Parish to proceed with erection of a $300,000 addition to its parochial school.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Thomas G. Smyth, pastor of the church, said yesterday that construction of the addition will begin late this year or early in 1950. Blessed Sacrament School is at 5941 Chevy Chase pkwy.

Enrollment in the school is 825, Monsignor Smyth said, and additional space and facilities are badly needed. The proposed addition will include six new classrooms, an assembly room seating 500, an office, library, clinic and meeting rooms for church and school organizations.

Nursing School Graduation Held At Takoma Park

Nursing is more than changing bandages, taking temperatures and bringing meals, Elder George E. Vandeman, associate secretary of the Ministerial Department, General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, told 22 members of the graduating class at Washington Sanitarium School of Nursing at exercises last night in Sligo Church, Takoma Park, Md.

Nursing is inspiring confidence, creating faith and hope, he declared. "The final value of any work is not so much what is done, but the way it is done and the way depends upon the motives and spirit of the one who does," Elder Vandeman said.

Diplomas were presented by Dr. Robert A. Hare, medical director of the sanitarium. The invocation was by Elder W. E. Nelson, treasurer of the General Conference, and the benediction by A. Bernice Loasby, sponsor of the class.

Homemade Ring Toss

If, on one of those rainy, shut-in days your youngsters whiningly begin to ask, "What shall we do now?" here's an idea that may be just the answer.

Cut three or four 12-inch lengths of rope. Try half-inch Manila rope or the stiff cotton rope that is used for clothes lines. Bend these into a circle and tape the ends tightly together with adhesive or electrician's tape. Now dig into your clothespin bag and pull out one of the old-fashioned round-headed pins. Next secure a heavy cardboard box six or eight inches square. Make a small hole in the center of the bottom and shove the pin through. The spread of the legs of the pin holds it quite securely.

If you wish to make it even more firm, wrap a piece of tape around the part of the pin just above the surface of the box and fasten the end to the box. Repeat this on the other side so that the pin is held erect.

Children will enjoy trying to ring the pin. Points may be decided upon or the youngsters may prefer just to toss the rings over the pin as they will. Of course, the more the youngsters help in making this bit of game equipment, the better they will like it.

The Lyons Den . . .

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Richard Strauss, the Viennese composer who died Thursday, earned some income during his last years by writing several copies of his score of "Rosenkavalier" and selling the long-hand documents to collectors. "I do not sell them as original manuscripts," said Strauss. "I sell them merely as autographs" . . . He played his "Rosenkavalier" for Bea Lillie and Reginald Gardiner during their USO tour at the end of the war. He insisted that when he refused to billet some SS. men in his home, it displeased Hitler—and that this caused Der Feuhrer to rule that Strauss' birthday no longer would be an official holiday.

Strauss once tried to persuade Max Reinhardt to produce his newest operetta in London. The operetta had been successful in Berlin and Vienna, but Reinhardt, after a trip to England, decided against the London production . . . "You are wrong," Strauss told him. "Believe me, Max, all London is waiting to hear this music. They must hear it. They should hear it" . . . "If you really believe that London must hear this music," said Reinhardt, "then I advise you that the best way is via long-distance telephone."

Dean Acheson will head the American delegation to the U. N.'s General Assembly. Nobody as yet knows who will head the Soviet delegation. The Russians, incidentally, will send 70 people to the Assembly—and U. N. officials can't explain why so many are needed . . . Secretary of Defense Johnson will be interviewed by Representative Sabath and the Illinois delegation on WCFL's "Quorum Call" on Sunday, in which he will discuss his reported differences with Dean Acheson over granting Marshall Plan funds to Tito . . . Henry Youngman tells of a man walking in the dark, who heard a voice; "Stick 'em up!" He asked: "Stick what up?" and the voice replied: "Don't confuse me. This is my first stick-up."

Nehru will be given a testimonial dinner at the Waldorf during his visit here. J. J. Singh, president of the Indian League, invited Dagmar Godowsky to attend and she asked if it would be broadcast. "Not yet. Do you think people would be interested in hearing Nehru?" said Singu. Miss Godowsky, before phoning David Sarnoff, who immediately arranged for an NBC hook-up, told Singh: "If you doubt people will be interested, I quote you an Austrian proverb: 'He who stands in front of the cathedral cannot see its tower' " . . . DuPont's attorneys have taken over two floors at No. 1 5th ave., to prepare for the defense in the anti-trust case . . . Winthrop Rockefeller's war-letters will be compiled into a book, but only for private printing.

Orozco, the famed Mexican artist who died this week, visited New York in 1946, years after he had vowed never to cross the border. His anger, he told me, was at the border-guards who refused to let him take his paintings with him because they were deemed censorable. Before making his last journey, he sent his wife North with his paintings. And when the customs men didn't object to the pictures, Orozco followed her . . . He had a long feud with Diego Rivera. It was settled when their agents opened a joint gallery. "It must be called the 'Orozco-Rivera Gallery' because O comes before R," his agent said. Rivera's man said: "No. Diego Rivera—'D'—that's before 'O' " . . . "Orozco's first name is Celmente—'C' before 'D'," said Orozco's man, and so the Orozco-Rivera Gallery came into being.

Ground Broken For New Church In Arlington

Members of Clarendon First Baptist Church, Highland and Wilson blvds., Arlington, Va., yesterday broke ground for a new $300,000 church building.

The new building will replace the present church sanctuary, which is to be torn down. It will include a main auditorium seating over 1000 persons, Sunday school class rooms and a kitchen.

While the new building is under construction, the congregation will hold Sunday morning services in the Ashton Theater, 3166 Wilson blvd., Arlington, and evening services in the educational building of the church.

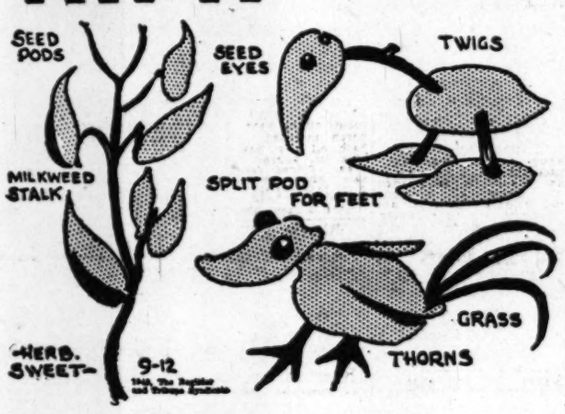
CREATE MILKWEED POD CREATURES



You often see milkweed pods in the fall of the year as you travel around in your car enjoying the fine autumn weather and countryside. The next time you see some of these pods hanging at the top of their strong stalks, gather a hat full and take them home to use for creating some odd-shape creatures.

The beauty of the wild milkweed seed as it drifts over the country tempts you to open the mature pods and let the seeds sail away. These pods develop at different speeds, but closed pods should be selected along with the open ones, just for variety. When you start to assemble some animal shapes, use small twigs or toothpicks and fasten the pods together into unusual beasts. Pods may be split to fashion wings, tails, and feet.

Use grass, seeds, and thorns to create the eyes and other features. Line up your grotesque creations on the mantle or on a bookshelf and enjoy the remarks of your friends as they see them.

TOMORROW—CREPE PAPER RIBBONS FOR CONTESTS.

What's the Verdict

FOULED UP

Q. Page had considerable farm land, and Davis wanted to buy some of it. They had dickered over various parts of it, and several times had been close to a deal on some of it. Finally Page wrote: "You can have my east 40 acres for $100 an acre." Davis replied by mail: "Your offer satisfactory. I accept." When it came time to complete the bargain, it turned out that Page had meant to write: "west 40," and that Davis had thought he meant the north 40. Page insists that Davis take the west 40 and Davis claims he is entitled to the north 40. Who is right?

A. Making of a contract requires a meeting of the minds of the parties. Here there was no meeting of minds, as they were thinking of different things. Thus there never was a contract. However, since this is a deal concerning land, the terms of which are in writing, some courts would hold there was an enforceable contract to sell the particular land described, even though the description was inadvertent. But neither Page nor Davis could force completion of the sale of the acreage he had in mind.

Luncheon Club

I like the kind of luncheon club . . . That gathers once a week . . . To laugh and sing, report on things . . . And hear some person speak . . . It makes for good companionship . . . Musical Career Ends On a Sad Note

Harry Traub of 2743 Lorcom lane, Alexandria, Va., suspects that there's a real human interest story in the recent classified ad which stated with simple dignity:

"Trumpet—$175. Thought I was a musician. I wasn't."

ADD SIGNS

Martin Russell of 546 S. 18th st., Arlington, Va., tells me that a Boston billboard advertises:

"Mission Orange—The Drink That Makes Thirst a Pleasure."

AGAIN?

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, who ran the Selective Service System during the war, has quite a sense of humor.

He was in the WRC studios the other day to do a radio program, and in the course of his stay was introduced to several of the station's bright young men.

In each case the boss of the wartime draft held out his hand, grinned, and said: "Greetings."

BUT THE HOURS AIN'T BAD

The reason Veep Barkley doesn't up and ask the gal to marry him is that there's not much chance for advancement in his present job.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I think you're very mean.

Our Nats have probably had the smallest crowds in years. They probably don't think they have much to play for.

If you don't think any more of the Nats than that, you're no friend of mine. Why don't you move to some town where they always win? Some sportsmanship if you don't like your own team because it's a losing team.

Mary Tankersley
47 Wheatley st.
Kensington, Md.

Dear Mary:

I'm thoroughly ashamed of myself, but I'm afraid I'm beyond reform.

I try real hard to cheer for the Nats, on the grounds that it's the accepted thing for a Washingtonian to do.

But try as I may, I still find myself admiring DiMaggio and Williams and all those other good ballplayers—who are forever beating our ears off.

Bill

P. S. Don't you have the cart before the horse? Do ballplayers become skillful when big crowds attend the games, or do big crowds attend the games when the ballplayers are skillful enough to attract the crowds?

PET PEEVE

Garage and parking lot attendants frequently find it necessary to move cars out into the street for a few moments, to "unblock" other cars which are being called for by their owners.

All too often the attendants whip these vehicles across the sidewalk with a reckless disregard for pedestrians. Whether the drivers are moving forward or in reverse, they seem to labor under the misapprehension that the sidewalk is their private property, and that anybody who uses it is trespassing.

One of these days, somebody is going to get hurt—and I hope it turns out to be one of those bronco busting drivers, via a punch in the nose from an irate pedestrian.

SOFTEST JOB IN TOWN

My guests on this afternoon's radio program will be two guys who should be named Riley, because they certainly live the life of—Post Sports Editor Bus Ham and Columnist Shirley Povich.

Bus will give us the dope on the upcoming football season while Shirley discusses the hot pennant races in the two major baseball leagues. Both are experts, who know practically all the answers.

The only thing neither of them can ever explain to my satisfaction is how grown men can make a career of spending their "working" hours at ball games.

PERSONAL NOTES

LIVE AND LEARN

Nate Leiderman of 1508 41st st. se. can come collect one ice cream soda any time he's ready.

He bet me that there is no speed limit on Rock Creek pkwy. I said I was sure there was a speed limit. The Park Police say I am wrong, as usual. The law says:

"No specific speed limit shall apply to the highways in the park areas in the District of Columbia, unless a speed limit is prescribed for a particular road or section of roadway by the posting of official signs."

Beech dr., for example, is posted. But most other roads are not.

However you're warned not to get any ideas about driving through the parks at unreasonable speeds. The cops can always get you for "reckless" driving—which means driving in a manner which is not considered safe under existing traffic conditions.

There's an interesting sidelight to the foregoing. When Park Police have a short strip of road under their jurisdiction and it connects on both ends with District streets, Park officials post their strip with the same speed limit as that which applies on the city street.

An example is the block of Constitution ave. nw. between 15th and 16th sts. That single block is under Park Police jurisdiction. On either side of it, the Metropolitan Police are in charge.

Do you know why?

Truman Called Vaughan's Coach

By Drew Pearson

White House intimates say President Truman is taking the battle over Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan more seriously than the fight over Government reorganization, arms for the North Atlantic Pact or any of the main planks on the Fair Deal program.

Vaughan

Before Vaughan testified, President Truman personally coached him on every possible question the Senators could ask. Vaughan's statement was rewritten three times and reduced from 20-odd pages of vitriol to a reasonable length. The President also urged his military aide to be all sweetness and light, not to lose his temper, never to insult the Senators, never to mention his critics by name.

Mr. Truman was chiefly worried over any probing of Vaughan campaign contributions, since the haphazard general had insisted on bypassing the Democratic National Committee and worked direct with Louis Johnson. How much Vaughan raised in the last campaign probably he himself doesn't know, but some insiders estimate it at around $100,000, from all sorts of sources.

Police Statism

THE WHITE HOUSE has really been using police-state methods in connection with the Vaughan investigation. Not only do Senators have a pretty good idea that their phones are being tapped, but certain witnesses and investigators have been subjected to pressure.

Francis Flannigan, ace investigator for the Senate Committee, got a threat from Trumanite Charles Clark, formerly attached to the Truman Committee. Clark now draws $1000 a month as lobbyist for Franco Spain, and is on intimate terms with the White House.

Congressman Schafer of Michigan, Republican, also says he got a threatening phone call from the White House immediately after his public statement that General Vaughan should be court-martialed. Others who have tangled with General Vaughan also have strangely backtracked, with the appearance of having been either threatened or politically bribed.

For instance, Col. Wm. Lee, who got into a scuffle with John Maragon in Rome and was subsequently reprimanded and demoted, at first told newsmen that the Army crackdown came as a result of the Maragon incident. Lee even put this in writing, while the official text of his reprimand specifically cites the Maragon incident.

Despite these written statements, however, Colonel Lee suddenly backtracked, said he didn't really think his demotion resulted from the Maragon incident. The reversal had all the earmarks of a quick and powerful reminder from Washington that he would be up for promotion again soon.

Roosevelt on Loyalty

When Franklin Roosevelt was President of the United States, he applied to government the same strategy a military commander applies to his men in the field. If a member of his Administration became a liability, made too many enemies in Congress, Roosevelt eased him out—even though they were intimate friends—just as a military commander sometimes has to desert men in the field.

Rexford Tugwell, once summarized it this way to friends when he resigned as Undersecretary of Agriculture:

"A general in battle can't afford to go into the frontline trenches. He's got to stay behind at staff headquarters. When his subordinates become casualties, they either get shipped back to hospitals or get buried. No commander can hold up a war because of them.

"In the battle over pure food and drug advertising," continued Tugwell with no bitterness, "I was carrying out Roosevelt's ideas. But it was much better for me to take the rap and let him stay behind the political firing line. All the advertisers in the country, plus the newspapers, are now sore at me, and it's better for the chief if I now resign."

He did.

Harry Truman, however, believes in getting into the front-line trenches, regardless of polititcal shot and shell, and taking just as much crititcism as his wounded subordinates. It's a fine personal quality, but seriously impedes his political program. And after all, Truman was elected on the basis of his program, not because of his ability to defend a bumbling major general.
